Adv. 6.5.35

The strange story of her life, and the unique collection of notes, of legends, languages and tribal customs that Mrs. Bates has made in her 35 years among the aborigines should be a unique publication, and an invaluable addition to ethnological science, so far as personal observation and human contact are concerned.

Mr. H. R. Othams, one of the representatives of the University of Adelaide Music Examinators Board, will leave by the express today for Melbourne, where he will attend the annual conference of the Australian Music Examinators Board, which will open tomorrow morning.

UP-COUNTRY AND CITY

"Gumtoes." By Rex Ingamells. Adelaide: F. W. Preece & Sons.

"Songs of a Southerner." By H. J. Byrne. Adelaide: The Hassell Press.

The demand for poetry is hardly what it used to be. The greater, therefore, is the courage of these two Adelaide men, who have given their Muse an airing in slim booklets. What John Masefield lately found specially attractive in the work of Mr. Ingamells was, no doubt, its distinctive note. One particularly fine passage echoes, either English or Australian; unless there is an echo of the Laureate himself in the catalogue:—

> the creaking mast; the screech and call of sea-birds flying: and to see the tall Magnificence of some fine sailing ship . . . I love sea-rains; and noisy porpoises." City life has no place in this book. To see the work of a young man, it is singularly free from introspection, and the first person-singular. Its chief charm is a knowledge of the far interior, a land of camels, and Afghans, and the grim red peaks which Hans Heysen has latterly discovered. Here is a sonnet which might fitly find a place in any Australian anthology:—

Forlorn Beauty

O, I have seen one flaming peak at dawn
Across a sea of sand. Alone it stood,
And bore of all but color; no great wood
Had up its sides a shaggy mantle drawn,
Seared by the desert winds, by hot suns shorn
Of Nature's tenderest gifts, it seemed to brood,
As if it knew its beauty never could
Bring joy, forever mighty and forlorn.
There was nought else in that vast lonely place
To breathe of Beauty; and I gazed in awe,
To think that even there she held her sway;
To think that, her staunch slave, with such fierce grace
That peak at dawn blazed centuries before,
And so blazed now, and so should blaze for aye.

Mr. Byrne's style is very different. As befits the General Secretary of the Public Service Association, he sings of city ways, with holidays at Port Elliot, or Launceston, and London. He looks on life with a strong religious sense, and finds it good:—"Tomorrow's cares will soon be yesterday." Enough, he may hate, he cannot make me sin."

Thank God for sleep." He rather specialises in the sonnet form, and wisely so, for the very overcoming of its artificial difficulties confers merit. Perhaps the best work in this little booklet—the profits of which are to go to the Adelaide Children's Hospital—is the thoughtful dimension of Australia's recovery from the Depression. A sample of this:—

We do not know

How far we've come, nor many barren track
(Though sanctified by penitential tears)
Whilst we have trudged, it seems like untold years,
We shall, like erring children, be brought back
To our old homestead, beautiful and plain,
That lives in memory of heart and brain.
The unpretentious garb and simple face
So satisfying in the bracing air
We learned to know.

JUBILEE MEDALS AWARDED

Nearly 500 S.A. Recipients

The names of the 6,500 recipients of the King's Silver Jubilee Medal, including nearly 500 South Australians, were announced yesterday at Canberra and in all the State capitals.

The Federal and State lists alike are of a very democratic character, including men and women who, in various walks of life have been chosen receive the award for their services to the country. The Federal list is headed by his Excellency the Governor-General (Sir Isaac Isaacs) and Lady Isaacs, and the State lists by the Governors, Premiers, and Cabinet Ministers.

The South Australian list contains more than one hundred representatives of the Government, Parliament, the judiciary, the churches, the medical, teaching, and other professions, and practically every public and semi-public body in the State.

In addition, about 80 South Australians are included in the list of 1,450 awards made by the Commonwealth to persons in every part of Australia, apart from those in the Federal Public Service.

The announcement of the lists was accompanied by a statement that the medal issued on the 6th May, the Silver Jubilee Medal is classified as an official medal, to be worn, on all occasions on which decorations and medals are worn on the left breast, after all Jubilee, Coronation, and Durbar medals, which follow war medals in the order of precedence. Women who have no other decorations or medals will wear the Jubilee Medal on the left shoulder of the dress, the ribbon in this case being in the form of a bow. Women who have a medal in possession of official medals worn on a bar, may, if they wish, add the Jubilee Medal to the bar, instead of wearing it separately on a bow.
