A Principles-based Approach to
ACT with Self-Forgiveness: New Approaches to Flexible Living

Grant Malcolm Dewar

A Dissertation submitted in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Psychology (Clinical)
University of Adelaide, December 2017
Declaration

I, Grant Malcolm Dewar, certify that this work contains no material which has been accepted for the award of any other degree or diploma in my name, in any university or other tertiary institution and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contains no material previously published or written by another person, except where due reference has been made in the text. In addition, I certify that no part of this work will, in the future, be used in a submission in my name, for any other degree or diploma in any university or other tertiary institution without the prior approval of the University of Adelaide and where applicable, any partner institution responsible for the joint-award of this degree. I give consent to this copy of my thesis when deposited in the University Library, being made available for loan and photocopying, subject to the provisions of the Copyright Act 1968. I acknowledge that copyright of published works contained within this thesis resides with the copyright holder(s) of those works. I also give permission for the digital version of my thesis to be made available on the web, via the University’s digital research repository, the Library Search and also through web search engines, unless permission has been granted by the University to restrict access for a period of time. I acknowledge the support I have received for my research through the provision of an Australian Government Research Training Program Scholarship.

Signature

Date 2/12/2017

Name

Grant Malcolm Dewar
Acknowledgement

This thesis is inspired by Jan Dewar my life companion and my sons Gharad and Jordan Dewar who have given me the life, insight, strength and fortitude to bring these ideas to life. The passing of my father Ken Dewar was central to the message contained in this thesis, and it is my hope that the work begun in this dissertation will benefit those are caught by the chaos of contemplated or completed self-harm. My academic supervisors, Dr Peter Strelan and Professor Paul Delfabbro, have provided me with unceasing support and encouragement regarding academic rigour and the crafting of this work; I thank them for their support to persist and break through. I thank Dagmara Rittano for her support throughout my Psychology career.
ACT WITH SELF-FORGIVENESS: NEW APPROACHES TO FLEXIBLE LIVING

Contents
Declaration .............................................................................................................................. ii
Acknowledgement .............................................................................................................. iii
Figures ................................................................................................................................ x
Tables ............................................................................................................................. xi
A Principles-based Approach to ACT with Self-forgiveness: New Approaches to Flexible Living ... 1
Abstract ................................................................................................................................. 2
Introduction and Thesis Context .......................................................................................... 3
Aims ....................................................................................................................................... 5
Presentation of Findings – an Outline ................................................................................... 6
Chapter 1 ................................................................................................................................ 8
The Double-Edged Sword: How Language Creates a Need for Self-Forgiveness Synopsis ......... 8
Abstract ................................................................................................................................. 11
The Double-Edged Sword: How Language Creates a Need for Self-forgiveness ..................... 12
Definitions and Responses to Self-Forgiveness .................................................................... 14
Clarifying Self-Forgiveness - Dispositions and States ............................................................. 16
Genuine Self-Forgiveness ...................................................................................................... 18
Initial Indicators of the Usefulness of Self-Forgiveness .......................................................... 20
Responding to the Challenges of Self-Forgiveness ................................................................. 22
Language, dispositions, and states: guiding Self-forgiveness .................................................. 23
Understanding meaning-making to move toward self-forgiveness ......................................... 25
Genuine Self-Forgiveness: Taking Actions That Work ........................................................... 27
RFT and Self-Forgiveness: Creating Insight and Responsibility ............................................. 28
The Construction of the Self – Who are we to Forgive Ourselves? ......................................... 30
RFT Provides Pathways to Transcendence to Support Self-Forgiveness ............................... 32
RFT, Understanding Struggle and Suffering to Create Self-Forgiveness ............................... 34
The Therapeutic Application of RFT and ACT for Self-Forgiveness ...................................... 38
Identifying a Burden ............................................................................................................ 42
Taking Perspective ............................................................................................................... 43
The ACT of Self

Chapter 2

References

Conclusion

ACT WITH SELF-FORGIVENESS: NEW APPROACHES TO FLEXIBLE LIVING

Identifying Values and Pathways

Getting Unstuck

Granting Self-Forgiveness

Values in Action

Commitment to Ongoing Self-Forgiveness

Conclusion

References

Chapter 2

The ACT of Self-Forgiveness: A Principles-Based Response to Intrapersonal Offence Synopsis:

Abstract

The ACT of Self-Forgiveness: A Principles-Based Response to Intrapersonal Offence

Universality of Distress and Current Treatment Approaches

Self-Forgiveness and its Therapeutic Applications to Treatment

Therapeutic Benefits of Self-forgiveness

Third Wave Psychological Behavioural Therapies and Novel Approaches to Self-Forgiveness

The Double-Edged Sword of Language its Contribution to Intrapersonal Offence

The Novel use of RFT and ACT for Genuine Self-Forgiveness

Origins of Victimless Offence

Developing Practical Approaches to Self-Forgiveness Interventions

Expanding ACT/RFT to Provide a Principles-Based Approach to Self-Forgiveness

Using Psychological Flexibility to Genuinely Forgive Oneself - The ACT of Self-Forgiveness and Its Seven Principles

Identifying a transgression

Taking perspective

Values and pathways

Getting unstuck

Granting self-forgiveness

A Values-based Action Plan

Commitment to self-forgiveness

Doing the work of self-forgiveness

Self-forgiveness in client populations
ACT WITH SELF-FORGIVENESS: NEW APPROACHES TO FLEXIBLE LIVING

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>References</th>
<th>152</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Chapter 4</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Thematic Analysis of Practitioner Perspectives on the Application of a Self-Forgiveness Intervention Using ACT Synopsis</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abstract</td>
<td>166</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Thematic Analysis of Practitioner Perspectives on the Application of an intervention: ACT with Self-Forgiveness</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Therapeutic Benefits of Self-forgiveness</td>
<td>168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A novel use of ACT and RFT in self-forgiveness</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Developing Practical Approaches to Self-Forgiveness Interventions</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Present Study</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ACT Training</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The ACT of Self-Forgiveness - Seven Principles</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Method</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Procedure</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thematic analysis</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Results</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction to ACT and Awareness of Self-Forgiveness</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Self-Forgiveness - Epiphany, Realization Empowerment and Release</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Changing Responses to Focus on Transgressions, Distress and Trust of Self</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The ACT Matrix and its Applications to Self-Forgiveness</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Values, Responsibility and Self-Forgiveness</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Self-forgiveness as a response to self-harm</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Self-Forgiving responses to addictive behaviours and relapse</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Principles-Based Design</td>
<td>193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Discussion</td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Limitations</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summary</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusions and Future Directions</td>
<td>201</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>References</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Chapter 5 ........................................................................................................................................... 213
Self-Forgiveness and the ACT Matrix: Responses to Chronic Pain and Substance Abuse Within
Families Synopsis ................................................................................................................................. 213
Abstract ............................................................................................................................................... 216
Self-Forgiveness and the ACT Matrix: Responses to Chronic Pain and Substance Abuse within
Families .................................................................................................................................................... 217
1. Theoretical and research basis ............................................................................................................. 217
   Self-Forgiveness and its role in Therapeutic Contexts ........................................................................ 217
   New Approaches to Facilitating Self-Forgiveness ............................................................................. 218
2. Case Introduction ................................................................................................................................. 226
3. Presenting Complaints ............................................................................................................................ 227
4. History ................................................................................................................................................ 228
5. Assessment .......................................................................................................................................... 230
6. Case Conceptualisation ......................................................................................................................... 231
7 Course of Treatment and Assessment of Progress .............................................................................. 233
Psychological Measures of Treatment Progress ............................................................................... 242
   Depression Anxiety and Stress Scale (DASS 21). ........................................................................... 243
   The Genuine Self-Forgiveness Scale (GSFS). .................................................................................. 243
   The Self-Forgiveness Self-Report .................................................................................................... 244
   The Acceptance and Action Questionnaire (AAQ-II). ..................................................................... 244
   Cognitive Fusion Questionnaire (CFQ 7). ...................................................................................... 245
8. Complicating Factors ............................................................................................................................. 245
9. Barriers to Care ..................................................................................................................................... 245
10. Follow-Up .......................................................................................................................................... 246
12. Recommendations to Clinicians and Students ............................................................................... 246
References ............................................................................................................................................. 248
Discussion ............................................................................................................................................... 255
Preliminary Overview .............................................................................................................................. 255
Theoretical Discussion ............................................................................................................................ 256
Transcendent Perspective-Taking ....................................................................................................... 256
Self-Forgiveness Based on Radical Self-Acceptance ........................................................................ 258
A Principle-Based Approach to Self-Forgiveness .......................................................... 260
Self-Care for Allied Health Professionals ........................................................................ 261
A Transdiagnostic Approach for Multiple Co-morbidities ............................................. 262
Limitations and Future Directions .................................................................................. 264
Appendix A Ethics Approval ........................................................................................... 267
Appendix B Invitation to Participate ................................................................................ 269
Appendix C Participant Information .............................................................................. 272
Appendix D Informed Consent ....................................................................................... 290
Appendix E Online Survey and Statistical Measures .................................................... 299
References .................................................................................................................... 313
Figures

Figure 1: ACT Matrix for Self-Forgiveness adapted from Polk and Schoendorff (2014) .................. 178

Figure 1: ACT Matrix for Self-Forgiveness adapted from Polk and Schoendorff (2014) ... 219
Tables

Table 1 The ACT of Self-Forgiveness - Seven Principles ................................................................. 82

Table 1 The ACT of Self Forgiveness - Seven Principles ................................................................. 126

Table 2 ACT Presentation, Summary, Agenda and Exercises ......................................................... 131

Table 3 Means and Standard Deviation of ACT and ACT with Self-Forgiveness at pre and post treatment and six-week follow-up .................................................................................. 138

Table 4 Repeated Measures ANOVA Main Effects for treatment between Pre-treatment and Six-week follow-up. Interactions for ACT and ACT with Self Forgiveness, comparing post-treatment and six-week follow-up .................................................................................. 139

Table 5 ANOVA for ACT and ACT with Self Forgiveness Subjects at six-week follow-up
Difference of Means and Comparison of Effects ACT alone and ACT with Self Forgiveness .................................................................................................................................................. 141

Table 6 T-tests and effect sizes comparing scores ACT and ACT with Self Forgiveness at pre and post-treatment; post-treatment and six-weeks follow up; and pre-treatment and six-weeks follow up .................................................................................................................................. 142

Table 1 ACT Presentation, Summary, Agenda and Exercises .......................................................... 177

Table 2 The ACT of Self Forgiveness - Seven Principles ................................................................. 179

Table 3 Description of respondents to phone survey ......................................................................... 183

Table 4 Thematic analysis: the comparison of ACT and ACT with self-forgiveness, themes and subthemes, Awareness of ACT and Self-Forgiveness; Epiphany, Realization, Empowerment, and Release; Changing Responses to Transgressions; Distress and Trust; The ACT Matrix Values, Responsibility; Response to Self-Harm; Addictive Behaviours and Relapse; Principles Based Delivery ............................................................................................... 186

Table 1 Psychological Measures Treatment progress at Commencement, 6 weeks, 13 Weeks, 26 Weeks and 52 Weeks ........................................................................................................................................... 242
A Principles-based Approach to

ACT with Self-forgiveness:

New Approaches to Flexible Living

Grant Dewar

University of Adelaide

Author Note

Correspondence: Grant Dewar, ph: +61417869411

Email: grant.dewar@adelaide.edu.au

University of Adelaide, School of Psychology, Faculty of Health Science
Abstract

This dissertation explores the potential additive benefits of self-forgiveness within Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT). It examines the importance of self-forgiveness and new wave treatment approaches for addressing psychological distress, which most commonly manifests as anxiety and depression. This research sought to establish explicit and practical links between current evidence-based approaches within Relational Frame Theory (RFT) and ACT, together with research into self-forgiveness, and tested the potential value of a set of principles that could be used with both individuals and groups affected by shame and guilt associated with personal transgressions.

Key Words: ACT, RFT, Language, Self-Forgiveness, Principles-Based, Victimless, Intrapersonal Offence.