

THE STUDIO CRITIQUE IN ARCHITECTURAL EDUCATION

by

SUSAN J. SHANNON

DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE

UNIVERSITY OF ADELAIDE

A Thesis

submitted to the University of Adelaide in fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy

November, 1995

TABLE OF CONTENTS

| | |
|--|------|
| Title page | (i) |
| Contents | (ii) |
| Abstract | (iv) |
| Statement of Originality | (v) |
| Acknowledgements | (vi) |
| Chapter 1 | 1 |
| Introduction: A View of Critique as Central to Architectural Education and Practice. | |
| Chapter 2 | 34 |
| Literature Review: Architectural Education in Higher Education | |
| Chapter 3 | 101 |
| Methodology comprising Methodology Review and Research Methodology including The Relationship between the Methodology and the Objectives of the Study | |
| Chapter 4 | 176 |
| Narratives, Interviews, Critical Analysis and Discussion. | |
| Chapter 5 | 303 |
| Researcher Reflection and Transformative Action in Teaching | |
| Epilogue | 378 |
| Concluding the Process of Educational Research | |
| Appendices | |
| I. Code of Ethics | 1 |
| II. Published Papers - Susan Shannon as Author | |
| Shannon, Susan (1994a) 'Dilemmas of a Feminist Ethnography', paper presentation at The Discursive Construction of Knowledge Conference, Adelaide, February 20-25, 1994. Proceedings Audio-tape 35, Research as Collaborative Enquiry . Adelaide: Department of Continuing Education. | 1-25 |
| Shannon, Susan (1994b) 'Beyond Qualitative Research: Participatory and Empowering Research' in Pearson, Margot (ed.) (1994) 'Higher Education in Transition', Research and Development in Higher Education 17 (in press) | 1-10 |
| Shannon, Susan (1994d) 'Equity within Architectural Education and Access to the Architectural Profession', in Ryan, Greg; Little, Penny and Dunn, Ian (eds.) Research and Development in Higher Education 16 183-190 | 1-6 |
| Shannon, Susan (1993c) 'Challenging Complicity: The Voice of Professional Women', in Carroll, Pauline (1994) (ed.) Women's Voices: Challenging for | 1-12 |

the Future. Proceedings of the 2nd National Women in Leadership Conference, Edith Cowan University, Perth, Western Australia, December 1-3,1993, 155-161

Shannon, Susan (1992b) 'In Defence of Small Group Critique: Developing Confidence and the Ability to make Judgements in Architecture Students in a Teaching/Learning Situation', in Parer, Michael (ed.) (1992) Research and Development in Higher Education 15 550-557 1-7

III. Published Paper - Susan Shannon and Co-authors

Shannon, Susan and Brine, John (1994) 'Consolidating Professional Skills and Developing the Confidence of Graduating Architects: How Problem Based Learning can promote self judgement and foster professional development at the entry point to a career', in Problem Based Learning: Reflection and Consolidation (1994) Sydney: APBL Network 201-217 1-17

Bibliography 1-24

ABSTRACT

This is a feminist poststructuralist thesis about studio-based, architectural critique in architectural education.

Critique is central to the teaching and assessing of design work in Architecture Schools and is employed in developing skills necessary for professional practice. Despite its importance and centrality in architectural education and the profession, as a process critique has not been subjected to a critical scrutiny to ascertain whether current critique processes are equitable for all students. Through undertaking a critical ethnography of a School of Architecture involving extensive observations and interviews, and the deconstruction of observations and interviews through a poststructuralist analysis, I argue from my location as a feminist researcher, architect and teacher that critique is not equitable for all students, discriminating in many ways against some students, particularly women.

The narrative which describes and reflects on the research process moves between the micro-scale focus on the seemingly unproblematic everyday practices in one School of Architecture, and the macro-scale notion of architectural education embedded in a culture of architecture which has a strong tradition of white Eurocentrism and male domination.

In the final Chapter of the thesis I describe alternative critique processes which seek to involve all students in the judgement of their own work. Critique processes which reduce students' dependence on expert judgement, and help students build confidence in their own judgement are potentially more empowering, and more equitable for all students.

STATEMENT OF ORIGINALITY

This work contains no material which has been accepted for the award of any other degree or diploma in any university or other tertiary institution and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contains no material previously published or written by another person, except where due reference has been made in the text.

I give consent to this copy of my thesis, when deposited in the University library, being available for loan and photocopying, with the following exceptions:

I would like to have closed access to the thesis until all the student 'actors' are no longer enrolled in the School: i.e. until the end of 1995 or such time as is determined by the Head of the School in consultation with me.

Signed

Dated 30-11-1995

Susan J. Shannon

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Both the process of educational research and writing a thesis are intensely lived experiences. I have benefited extraordinarily by the input of my four Supervisors and many other educators, researchers, teachers and students in these processes over three years.

Antony Radford, as the Professor of Architecture, brought a vital interest in architectural education to the research, as did Susan Coldicutt, the current Head of the Department of Architecture, when she ably stepped into the Supervision role whilst Tony was on Study Leave in 1994. Her close reading of the final drafts of the thesis was invaluable. Gerry Mullins, the Head of the Advisory Centre for University Education, has provided a useful critique of the process of critical educational research. Christine Ingleton, the Deputy Head of the Advisory Centre for University Education, has provided intensive critique and support for engaging critical educational research, and has inducted me into the process of conference paper presentation and submission, as well as providing a much valued friendship.

I would particularly like to acknowledge the review of parts of my research by many other researchers and educators, both in Australia and overseas, who have generously given their critique of the emerging arguments of the thesis through considering a 1993/4 Overview of the Thesis, and conference papers. Robert Smith, from the University of South Australia, has provided endless support for the process of critical educational research, has lent me texts and introduced me to many new authors and arguments.

Perhaps my most significant thanks should go to the students and teachers who willingly participated in this educational research with no thought to their own gain. Without their whole-hearted participation I could not have viewed the practices of critique in the School.

Without the enthusiasm, insights, reflection on my writing, and willingness of students and teachers in the School to involve themselves fully in the process of educational research this thesis could not have been written.