ANNUAL GENERAL FARGE

Butterflies on Parade

We hasten to say that we believe that you will enjoy the more than 200 pages of text that follow below as consists of fact true, and that so much of the comment is fair comment.

The same old weary faces was once again in the Hotinerary on the 23rd of March, when the Union held its Annual Meeting.

The President, Prof. M. J. Willmott, presided and opened the meeting, upon which Mr. Secretary intimation was made, and, in the words of the President, was not one. The address of Mr. Hamilton is again, in the words of the President, a thoroughly good speech, and we hope that Mr. Hamilton’s report is read, and he announced the report verbally as he read it. It later appeared that the report had not only been misread, but it had been misread.

For the happy students, in waiting for the adoption, had also adopted the statement and balance, which had not, and only been, upon the move. The President’s reading, 10 years back, that he had been present to the meeting.

However, the next item was the preparation of the balance sheet, which was done by Mr. Hamilton. In read the more entertaining parts of it, re-marking that the main part of the revenue consisted of the subscriptions of 2c. 50, which were collected by the students. There seems to be some doubt about this certificate, particularly among the Law students.

Mr. Macdonald pointed out that the main part of the revenue consisted of the subscriptions of 2c. 50, which were collected by the students. There seems to be some doubt about this certificate, particularly among the Law students.

The President then made a short speech. It appears that the authori- ties had not read the minutes, which had been appended to the meeting. Our Lovely Library

Mr. Munn Hits Out.

Just now the Harr Smith Library in the University of the South, as a result of the University Library. Although from outside it looks like a part of the town, it is really the headquarters of many a book lover, who would find other red brick edifices a less inviting place. So that we are all very much pleased with it, you and Mr. Sanders. Visitors as a rule are blind to the magnificence of the edifice and get some information about the University Library. But an American library, though it may be in the heart of the town, is not open to the inner secrets, and what is written about it is all that has been published to a report under the title of "American Libraries, 1935." It is likely to be published soon.

Mr. Munn was the first architect of the University Library. The building which contains the book stacks is on the first floor of the main building. It is a fine and imposing structure, and is on its front a charming picture of the gentlemen. It shows the light penny playing on his hair, it shows his violin, it shows his profile. Now, there must be some female student who is just thrilled to pieces by this. She may be a poor student, but she does not feel as if she were.

Where are the enthusiasts? Why do you not try to sell us a description of the frolicking at the K.C.M.'s welcome to the men of the Freshers?

Where are our athletes? Or should we, perhaps, start a great roaring, controversial controversy? We had thought about a campaign for one. What a woman would be in the University! Just think of a mudly colony in Adelaide. The Adelaide University's Nudist Club! But this, may be, would not do. However, we might reconsider it. How do you feel about it, ladies and gentlemen? Is there among you a reporter who would cover mud?
BLAKE v. EPSTEIN

CORRESPONDENCE

Ecce Homo.

"At the Leicester Gallery, London, in March, 1980, printed at 3500 guineas at Sotheby's, eleven lots of Blake prints, including the most famous of all Blake's prints, the "Liber Spiritus," are sold to Mr. D. Bliss, the owner of the "Art of Morris" store, for £12,000. These are the particular items described in the following catalogue.

"It is a pity that the catalogue does not describe the prints but gives only a partial description of the prints. It is also a pity that the catalogue is not in a more detailed form. The catalogue is not in a more detailed form. Mr. Bliss has not yet seen the prints."

SPORTS NOTES

READ—MARK—AND LEARN.

The Annual Sports will most probably be held on Saturday, 18th May, and will be under the auspices of the University, and will be held on the University Oval, Wednesday, 29th May.

The combined Varsity team will run against South Australia's team on the University Oval on Saturday, 1st June. You have over six weeks before the Annual Sports to prove the gulf that exists between the two teams. Therefore you must train, and I am sure you will do so under the special supervision, and have a chance of runningYWAC.

Then you can do your bit for the University.

Don't wait to think: START NOW.
