This novel comes to us inevitably associated with the praise it has received. The book is a remarkable piece of work, not for its subject matter, but for the manner in which it is written. Christianity in Politics

The first of several replies to a previous article by J. M. Flinn

Abreast of the Times

The present attitude towards religious interests in politics is controversial in Australia, especially among non-Catholic or non-Catholic denominations. Many would consider that the association of religious interests with politics is unnecessary and potentially dangerous. Yet it is possible that its dangers are exaggerated and that the possible benefits outweigh the risks. It is, therefore, advisable for the Church and State to be more cooperative in the promotion of religious and political causes.

Negative

Sincere I believe that this is not the case. The result of 1949 shows a strong demand for religious and political groups to cooperate. Mr. Finnis has already expressed these sentiments.

Reactions

Yet there are good reasons why the Church should not support political or religious causes. It is evident that a number of religious organizations are too well organized and too powerful.

Not valid

But all these constitute good reasons why the Church should be impartial in its support of political or religious causes.

Action

Individual Christians should be free to support any political or religious cause they believe is just and right. They should be free to express their opinions, to vote for candidates, and to be active in political movements. But the Church herself should be impartial in its support of political or religious causes.

Disagreement

The recent decisions of the Church in Australia concerning political parties are the result of a careful analysis of the situation. The Church believes that political parties are necessary in a democratic society. Therefore, it is necessary for the Church to support political parties. But the Church should not support any political party that is not consistent with the principles of the Church.

POLITICAL RE-EMERGENCE BY MALCOLM PENN

The policy of the Adelaide Catholic Diocese's Liberal Union is to provide a forum for the discussion of political issues and to promote the election of candidates who support the Liberal Union's policies.

ARTHUR CALWEY

He has also criticized the Liberal Union for its support of political parties. However, Mr. Calwey has expressed his support for the Liberal Union's policies and has stated that he agrees with its principles.

LORD'S PROSPECTS

Whenever he stands for the ALP, Mr. and Mrs. Calwey have always supported the Liberal Union. In his book, Mr. Calwey has stated that the Liberal Union's policies are consistent with the principles of the Church. He has also criticized the Liberal Union for its support of political parties.

WHITMILE

Whitmile, in particular, has supported the Liberal Union. He has stated that he believes in the principles of the Church and that the Liberal Union is consistent with these principles. He has also criticized the Liberal Union for its support of political parties.

Conclusions

At the recent meeting of the Liberal Union, Mr. Calwey was elected as the new leader of the Liberal Union. He has stated that he will continue to support the Liberal Union's policies and that he will work for the election of candidates who support these policies.

STOKE

Stoke is a town in the English county of Staffordshire. It has a population of approximately 25,000. It is located on the River Trent and is served by Stoke-on-Trent railway station.

A sandy red-brick house was built of brick in 1870. It is situated in the town of Fratland, near Stony Stratford in the English county of Northamptonshire. It is a Grade II listed building. The house was built by the Fratland Estates for the use of the Fratland family. It is now owned by the National Trust, who have restored it to its original condition.

By the way, the English word "stoke" can be used to mean "to keep going" or "to continue." It is also used to mean "a Nestor" or "a stoker." It is also used to mean "a stroke."
