DIGNIFIED AND GRACIOUS
"Mr. Fink" was the name by which he would become such an Assemblyman.

The Speaker, as he entered these words, the Legislative Assembly of Victoria was convened. The Assembly was filled with the presence of the Governor, who was already in his place, and the members of the Assembly, who had been called to order. The Governor was addressing the House, and the members were silent, listening attentively to his words.

The Governor, in a dignified and gracious manner, stated that Mr. Fink had been a member of the House for many years, and had always been a faithful and respectable member.

Mr. Fink was thanked by Parliament for his service, and a sketch in the House was made. The sketch was a representation of Mr. Fink's life, and it was done in a dignified and graceful manner.

Mr. Fink was presented with a scroll, which was a token of appreciation for his services to the House.

The Governor praised Mr. Fink, and stated that he was an excellent member of the House, and that he had always been a source of inspiration to the members.

Mr. Fink, in return, thanked the Governor and the members of the House, and stated that he was grateful for their kind words.

The assembly was then adjourned, and Mr. Fink, along with the Governor and the members of the House, left the chamber.
