The Select Comedies of Shakespeare

University Extension Lecture

At the University on Tuesday evening, Sir John Roll, M.A., the late Master of St. John's College, Oxford, gave his annual lecture on "The Sonnet Composers," the text of which has been issued in pamphlet form. The lecture, which was given in the Great Hall at the University, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. Sir John Roll's lectures are always popular, and this year's lecture was no exception, as evidenced by the size of the audience and the enthusiasm with which they were received.

The lecture was generally well received, and the audience was much interested in the topics discussed. Sir John Roll's lectures are always well prepared and delivered, and this year's lecture was no exception. The audience was much impressed by the lecturer's knowledge and his ability to convey complex ideas in an interesting and engaging manner.

Sir John Roll is a well-known scholar and writer, and his lectures are always well received. The audience was much impressed by the lecture, which was generally well received and appreciated. The lecture was a great success, and the audience was much impressed by the lecturer's knowledge and his ability to convey complex ideas in an interesting and engaging manner.

The lecture was generally well received, and the audience was much interested in the topics discussed. Sir John Roll's lectures are always well prepared and delivered, and this year's lecture was no exception. The audience was much impressed by the lecturer's knowledge and his ability to convey complex ideas in an interesting and engaging manner.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1914

Higher Education

The visit of the Registrar of the Adelaide University, Mr. C. R. Hodge, to Broken Hill is to be welcomed, as it means that local application of the higher education movement which is so necessary to the better life of this city, in which, busy with our iron and gold, we forget ourselves but little time for thought, and where our isolation almost cuts us off from all of the various channels through which the life-blood of Australian education and culture flows. Mr. Hodge need, we are sure, have no fear of any antagonism on the part of the Sydney University. That University being itself able to secure participation in the advantages which it places at the disposal of the people, the majority of the people of the State—advanced and backward—of every cost of education, the University of which I wish to speak in this connection, is not at all likely to adopt the democratic and widening policy of catering to the University of a higher education for the people of the Commonwealth in this direction. The very best way, indeed, would be to extend our education to South Wales to sink all parochial barriers for such are the limitations of the operations of the University of this, and that the University of Adelaide should be ready to meet the higher education needs of this city. all of which is to the advantage of the University itself, as shown by the attendance of South Australians.