UNIVERSITY DINNER
A SUCCESSFUL GATHERING
On Wednesday evening at the annual dinner of the University, held at the South Australian Hotel, a large number of the leading members of the University and other friends. The proceedings were opened by the Vice-Chancellor, Sir Leonard Donkin, who delivered a most appropriate address. He spoke on the importance of education and the necessity for maintaining a high standard in University work. He also referred to the recent extension of the University and the new buildings which were being erected. The Vice-Chancellor then presented the first prize to Miss Elizabeth Smith, who had won the prize for best work in the science faculty.

After the speeches, the guests were seated at long tables, and the dinner was served. The food was excellent, and the company was animated. The conversation was intelligent and stimulating, and many interesting discussions took place. The guests agreed that the dinner was a great success, and that the University was well represented.

In conclusion, the Chairman, Mr. J. P. Dutton, proposed the toast of "The Staff," and the guests replied with great enthusiasm. The evening ended with a song, and the guests dispersed with a feeling of satisfaction.

The next day, Thursday, the guests went on a tour of inspection of the new University buildings. They were shown around the new library, the lecture halls, and the laboratories, and were impressed by the modern facilities. They then proceeded to the new dormitories, which were large and comfortable, and were pleased with the accommodation provided for the students.

The guests then returned to the South Australian Hotel for a farewell dinner. The speeches of the day were repeated, and the guests once again expressed their satisfaction with the evening's proceedings. The day ended with a farewell to the University and its guests, who promised to return soon.
