Advocates debate on second reading of Register.

The question of the DENTAL BILL was again taken in Parliament this week, and the debate was concluded with an adjournment, the second reading of the measure having been carried with the support of both the government and the opposition. The bill has been the subject of much discussion and debate in the chamber, and the supporters of the bill have been able to point to its many advantages. The bill has been introduced in response to the need for better regulation of the dental profession, and it has been praised for its provisions that will ensure the public's health and safety.

The bill provides for the establishment of a Dental Board, which will have the power to license and regulate the practice of dentistry. It also includes provisions for the education and training of dental professionals, as well as the establishment of a dental registry. The bill has been welcomed by many as a step towards improving the standard of dental care in the country.

The debate on the bill was a lively one, with many speakers making strong points for and against its provisions. The supporters of the bill argued that it was necessary to improve the regulation of the dental profession and to ensure that the public was protected. The opponents of the bill, on the other hand, expressed concerns about the potential for interference in the practice of dentistry and the impact of the bill on the autonomy of the dental profession.

The debate is expected to continue in Parliament, with further amendments and considerations to be made before the bill is finally passed into law. The dental profession and the public will be closely watching the developments as the bill progresses through the legislative process.
