University of Adelaide

The new professor of literature.

Professor G. C. Hendrie (M.A., D.O.L.O., D.C.L.), appointed to the chair of literature and modern languages in the University of Adelaide, is a native of England. He was educated at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1881, and proceeded M.A. in 1883. He afterwards studied at Gonville and Caius College, where he was elected a fellow in 1882. He was ordained by the Church of England in 1883, and has been for the last nine years incumbent of the Anglican Church of St. John, Keswick, N. T. He is also a fellow of the University of Cambridge, and has been a member of the Royal Historical Society and the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge. He is the author of several works on political and literary subjects, and has contributed extensively to English periodicals. His appointment to the chair of literature and modern languages in the University of Adelaide is a welcome addition to the staff of the institution.
