MUSIC EXAMINATIONS.

REMARKS BY PROFESSOR ENNS.

In opening the season of music examinations at the University of Adelaide, Mr. J. M. Ennis, the Chairman of the Board of Examiners, said that the number of candidates had increased considerably from the previous year, and that the standard of the papers had been raised. He hoped that the results of the examinations would be satisfactory, and that the students would be encouraged to continue their studies.

The new scheme of examinations was designed to provide a more thorough test of the students' knowledge and to encourage them to study more extensively. The scheme included a number of changes, such as the introduction of aural tests and the provision of more opportunities for students to study music theory.

Mr. Ennis also expressed his appreciation of the efforts of the Adelaide School of Music, which had provided a valuable contribution to the education of music students in the city. He thanked the School for its cooperation and support.

THE NEW SCHEME OUTLINED.

AN AUSTRALIAN STANDARD DESIRED.

Dr. J. M. Ennis, Elder Professor of Music at the Adelaide University, explained the new scheme of music examinations in the context of the state of music education in Australia. He emphasized the importance of establishing a national standard for music examinations, which would ensure that students received consistent training and preparation.

Dr. Ennis noted that the previous scheme of examinations had been inadequate, with no aural tests and insufficient opportunities for students to study music theory. He explained that the new scheme included a number of changes, such as the introduction of aural tests and the provision of more opportunities for students to study music theory.

In acknowledging a vote of thanks presented by the students, Mr. Ennis said that he looked forward to visiting many of them when he would return at least once a year to give concerts or give lectures on music.
