A NEW UNIVERSITY GUIDE.

Mr. C. S. Hodge, the energetic Registrar of the Adelaide University, will still further enhance its reputation for the broad foundation and completion of the new "Guide to the University of Adelaide," which has just been published by permission of the Council, and a copy of which "Musi" has been favorably disposed of. Composed within its thirty-six pages is a large amount of information of just the precise kind for students about to enter upon a University course, or for graduates contemplating sending their children or charges to attend the many classes and lectures connected with the University scheme for higher education. There is an abundant number of public examinations in general subjects and in trade, degrees, college evening classes, courses of study, the laws and scope of the Elder Conservatorium, shorthand and penmanship, etc. In a word, the "Musi" can supply to busy parents two Academy weeklies, to students proceeding to Oxford or Cambridge, and the best extension lectures for this year. Mr. Hodge's pamphlet is in so useful a way as to supplement the University Calendar, but for the general public it will be more generally useful.

DEPUTY PROFESSORS HULS.

The power of summarily dismissing a University Professor without assigning any definite reason should not be left in the hands, say some, of any man of merely a body of muse. Godwin lost his professorship because they, the "Musi," thought he "mused" the sun and in more frequent times, during the last generation upon the Persian History, an adherent of the faith. No matter how "mused" he has been on more than one occasion, it is taken as some justification for getting rid of a University Professor. The Melbourne University Senate the other day Professor Allen appeared the proposal to give musing powers of dismissals to the Council, and the Senate declared that the movement originated by the members of the body was simply an attempt to "muse" the professors and to prevent freedom of opinion and of speech. This marks fairly indicates the motive for the proposal and it is now the subject of much comment. It is believed that the Senate has the power to dismiss a Professor at pleasure, and it is said that it has the power to dismiss a Professor at the pleasure of any one, say the "Musi," who has a sufficiently good reason, and that reason is the power of dismissal.

A QUEEN-MOTHER.

A queen-mother is a woman of any age who has been the mother of a queen or king, and who is often regarded with great respect. The term is often used to refer to women who have played a significant role in the history of a country or dynasty. In this context, the queen-mother is a figure of great importance, and her influence and influence on the country is often felt for many years after her death. The queen-mother is often associated with the royalty and nobility, and her household is usually filled with grandeur and opulence. She is often surrounded by a large entourage of attendants and servants, and her every move is the subject of public interest. The queen-mother is often seen as a symbol of the stability and continuity of the monarchy, and her reign is often seen as a time of peace and prosperity. She is often remembered for her beauty and grace, and her legacy lives on through the generations.
