RETURN OF PROFESSOR BRADE
Professor Braed, the University of Adelaide, is now engaged in the R.W. Victoria, which arrived from London late last night. He was, I am informed, a passenger for Adelaide for over twelve months, having reached England on the Cunard Mail Steamer. He has, however, long been in his home, and is now ready to start for his professorship in the University of Adelaide. Recent letters have been received from the University, and a first portion of his time has been devoted to the question of his health.

The general opinion among which is sought information is that the University is more secure the training of man in his primary education. The result of his explorations will be drawn to a river, which will be dedicated to the Government and the University. On the 2nd of March, the University of Cambridge will meet, and also the meeting of the British Association. Some time in May, the University of Cambridge will be held. It has been engaged in collecting materials for the preparation of a series, which is to be published in Scandinavia and elsewhere.
