THE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY

A space minutes the sublime and the recherche [sic], the students of the University as a whole, and the faculty of the University as a whole, were invited to a special convocation of degrees at the Adelaide University.

The university community, as usual, was made up of undergraduate and graduate students, faculty members, and alumni. The university community was invited to the ceremony to celebrate the achievements of the students.

COMMENOMINATION DAY

The absence of the medical faculty from the degree lists of the Adelaide University in 1901 is noted. There is no mention of medical students in the degree lists, but the only medical students of the University whose names figured in the degree lists were those who studied at Melbourne or at Sydney. It is possible that the absence of medical students from the University is due to the fact that the University of Adelaide is not yet fully established. It is possible that the absence of medical students from the University is due to the fact that the University of Adelaide is not yet fully established.

[The Register, 13 Dec. 1898]