to restore Adelaide's Medical School to its former state of efficiency. It appears to be recognized now that only time can test the wisdom of the Medical Board. Several letters have been received in the Press from scattered quarters, which are either in favor of the closure of the School altogether, or propose that it should be merely a temporary measure. These letters are signed by various well-meaning persons, but the best of them are written by those who have been intimately connected with the School for many years. The School has, however, been run on a very small scale, and it is feared that if it be closed it may not be able to be reopened. The Medical Board has, therefore, determined to keep the School open, and to make every effort to improve its efficiency. The present state of the School is far from satisfactory, but it is hoped that with suitable encouragement it may ultimately be able to carry on its work in a more satisfactory manner. The School is open to all who wish to enter it, and any person who believes that it is necessary for a young man to enter into the practice of medicine is welcome to apply for admission. The School is under the direction of Dr. J. B. W. Southall, and he is doing all that he can to make it a success. It is hoped that the School will ultimately be able to maintain itself on a satisfactory footing, and that it will be able to give a good education to those who enter it.
