THE REV. W. TEMPLE

RECEPTION AT ELDOR ALDER

A recent dinner in honour of the Rev. W. Temple, M.A., in the shape of an unaccustomed and unexpected welcome from the University Students' Christian Association, had been arranged. The address was given by Prof. Rennie, the rector of the college, and was followed by a gallery of prominent men and women, including the Rev. Dr. Williams, the chaplain of the college, and the Rev. Dr. Taylor, the librarian. The address was delivered in the chapel, and was followed by a dinner at the university hall.

The Rev. W. Temple, M.A., in an address at the reception tendered to him at Alder Hall on the evening of September 1st, spoke of the great changes that had taken place in the educational system of the country, and of the need for a new and better kind of education. He said that the old system of education was no longer adequate for the modern world, and that a new and better kind of education was urgently needed. He said that the new education should be based on a sound and practical foundation, and that it should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world.

In conclusion, he said that the new education should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world, and that it should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world, and that it should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world. He said that the new education should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world, and that it should be designed to meet the needs of the modern world.
