A GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION.

There was a great interest in the Elder Hall on Saturday evening, when Lieut.-Governor, Vice-Chancellor, and guests were gathered to witness a graphic account of the dash to the Pole, which Lieut.-Governor has endured, and which has cost him a fortune. It was an event that had been much anticipated by the public, and the audience was deeply moved by the lieutenant's account of his experiences.

The Lieutenant-Commander who led the expedition, Lieut.-Gov.-Commander, who has been in charge of the expedition since it was first conceived, and Lieut.-Commodore, who commanded the fleet, were present, as were also Lieut.-Admiral, who was the highest-ranking officer present. The Lieutenant-Commander, who has been in command of the expedition, was introduced by Lieut.-Commodore, who, in a brief address, spoke of the great importance of the expedition and of the need for continued support from all sections of the community.

The Lieutenant-Commander then proceeded to describe the expedition, and the audience was moved by his account of the difficulties and dangers encountered. He spoke of the ice conditions, the lack of food, and the general hardships faced by the crew. The Lieutenant-Commander emphasized the need for continued support, both financial and moral, and expressed his hope that the community would continue to provide the necessary support.

The Lieutenant-Commander's account was followed by a question-and-answer session, during which the audience had the opportunity to ask questions and express their support. The Lieutenant-Commander was gracious in his responses, and the audience was moved by his willingness to share his experiences.

Cordial Reception.

The Lieutenant-Commander was presented with a number of gifts, including a fine painting of the Antarctic, which was presented by the local artists' guild. The Lieutenant-Commander was deeply moved by the gesture, and expressed his appreciation for the community's support.

The evening concluded with a dinner in the Elder Hall, during which the Lieutenant-Commander was presented with a number of honorary degrees and awards. The Lieutenant-Commander was deeply honored by the gesture, and expressed his appreciation for the community's support.
