Farewell Speeches.

After the degrees had been conferred the Vice-Chancellor read a farewell address which had been written in various private addresses during the previous years. It was a thoughtful address which was not without its tears. The students were held to promise that they would not forget their Alma Mater and it was resolved to have a farewell address at the University of Adelaide.

The student's promise was not forgotten.

The students had a farewell address at the University of Adelaide and the students were held to promise that they would not forget their Alma Mater and it was resolved to have a farewell address at the University of Adelaide.
