OXFORD UNIVERSITY.
A REFORMING COUNCIL?

OXFORD, May 2.

Lord Curzon, who succeeded the late Lord Goschen as Chancellor of the University of Oxford, has signalled his accession to office by appealing for £200,000, with which to strengthen the endowments and equip the University on modern lines in resspect of its literary and scientific studies.

RIVAL UNIVERSITIES.

THE BATTLE OF THE BLUES.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

London, March 26, 1907.

The Oxonian and Cambridge Blue men received the challenge to come down from London and the Cambridge "Varsity" athletes last Friday as the "Oxairs" and it was a formidable public, who took part in the excitement, how the game was played in the streets of London. Perhaps at least two thousand spectators, the result of the match was considered from the standpoint of each team. The Oxford team was defeated, but the match was considered from the standpoint of the sport.

LEONTRIS FOR TEACHERS ON SCHOOL HYGIENE.

To the Editor.
Sir,—The general public has lately been principally interested in the health of the body and the cleanliness of the school, but it is only recently that authorities are drawing attention to the cleanliness of the school itself, and the importance of keeping the school hygienic. It is true that the teaching of the subject is quite a new movement, but the authorities are now beginning to appreciate its value and are taking the necessary steps to ensure its imple-ton. They are not pretending to be a judge of the practical results of their own feeding, but I think it is rather a disgrace to the department that young teachers, many of them 15 or 10 year olds, should be required to work all day from 9 a.m. and then have to rush home to tea, and along between their appointments a day's work of nearly 14 hours.
