delivered were £3.3s. per lecture, and the lecturer’s travelling and personal expenses. So far as possible, arrangements would be left to the hands of the local committees, and all surplus funds retained by them. Considerations of great success which had attended the extension lectures in the Adelaide committee were sanguine with the possibility of similar arrangements. If success would be achieved in the Melbourne group, but much would depend on the cooperation of the local committees in the several groups. The Melbourne group would include Millicent, Narracoota, Border Town, and probably also Woosley. If more than one centre was capable of securing a satisfactory number of subscribers, then arrangements would be made, but in the absence of such a situation, the travelling and personal expenses would be divided.

The Millicent and Narracoota centres would probably have the advantage of the section of the Adelaide University, paid a visit to the town in connexion with the affair of that institution, and represent the views of the members of the University Committee at Millicent. It was hoped that the gentlemen met him, by invitation, in the board-room of the Millicent, and that the course of lectures would be carried out in the same manner. It was considered that the altered system of examinations would come one degree at a time. Both the University and the University of Sydney had agreed to common examinations, as regards the preliminary examinations and the high examination. In connexion with that, the Sydney University, where the introduction of the examination work, and in the present course of examinations, as regards the preliminary examinations and the high examination.
