INTRODUCTORY NOTE

"The Circle of Chalk" is a traditional Chinese play taken from the Repertory of the Chinese Theatre called Yuan-Chu-po-cheng, i.e., The Hundred Pieces composed by the Yuan, or princes of the family of Genghiz Khan who reigned in China from 1259-1368.

The play first reached Europe in the nineteenth century in a French translation. It was from this that the German lyric poet, whose pen-name was Klabund, took it and re-modelled it into the form here presented. Klabund has remained fairly faithful to the original, the most obvious amendments showing where he has, as you might say, "modernized" it.

The English version by James Laver has reproduced the delicate lyricism which drew Klabund the poet in the first instance to the original play.

The situations that arise are essentially Chinese, with their piquant blending of beauty, humour, pathos, and wisdom.

"The Circle of Chalk" is the play which the Adelaide University students are taking over to Melbourne for the Drama Festival, to be held there this month. The Student Theatre Group, particularly those of its members who are taking part, would like to express their gratitude to Miss Patricia Hackett for making this, their second major production, possible, for she has not only produced the play but also provided the splendid costumes. The Group wishes also to thank the Theatre Guild for so generously giving them the proceeds from the sale of programmes to help cover expenses.
