MAURICE MAETERLINCK, born in Ghent in 1862, graduated as a barrister, but later abandoned that profession for a life work in literature and attained eminence as a dramatist and essayist. Among his works, completed in rapid succession, were a number of plays, perhaps the best known of which are Pelleas and Melisande, his famous marionette plays, and The Blue Bird.

This evening's moving little play has not before been performed in this country, and indeed, very rarely anywhere. It is essentially intimate theatre and would probably have little popular appeal.

Although more realistic than usual with Maeterlinck, it has that quality of mysticism that pervades all his work. It lies like a delicate shadow across the pattern softening the hard edges and bright colours of reality.

The action of the play takes place in the courtyard of Melingrane's castle

The time is fifteenth century
