

THE ICE CLIFFS OF ANTARCTICA.

This striking photograph gives an excellent idea of the nature and size of the towering and unscalable cliffs that occur in the Antarctic, where the inland ice meets the frozen sea. The height of the mass of ice shown in the picture may be judged from the comparative size of the two figures of the men in the bottom right-hand corner.