UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

Professor Darley Naylor will this evening conclude his course of extension lectures upon Euphides. He will treat of the play entitled "The Bacchae," which was revived in London by Mrs. Sothern in 1839, in the beautiful version of Professor Gilbert Murray. The interpretation of the poet's meaning in this tragedy has been the cause of much controversy during the last 20 years. The conservative view that Euphides here recreates the whole of his theological position held the field triumphantly until Professor Verrall commenced to write his remarkable essays entitled "Euphides, the Rationalist," because he was known for his rationalistic views.

The Advertiser, 23/6/14

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

SWAN SONG OF EURIPIDES.

Professor Darley Naylor gave the third of his series of extension lectures on "The Swan Song of Euripides" on the topics of the play of the same name as the Adelaide University on Tuesday evening. The lecture dealt with "The Bacchae," of which Verrall the poet had been the first to write his remarkable essays, entitled "Euphides, the Rationalist." Later Professor Norwood, of Manchester University, contributed valuable suggestions towards the solution of the riddle, and now the opinion is held largely that so far from being a revelation, "The Bacchae" emphasises Euripides' brand of the tale and the immorality in religion. In his conclusion he also observed that the play is a picture of the mood that may exist in religious controversy, of course, as it is. Nor, indeed, should it be denied, for Euripides during the last 10 years. This play was revived by Miss Dorothy Spinn in last year in the beautiful version of Professor Gilbert Murray. The interpretation of the poet's meaning in this tragedy has been the cause of much controversy during the last 20 years. The conservative view that Euripides here recreates the whole of his theological position held the field triumphantly until Professor Verrall commenced to write his remarkable essays entitled "Euphides, the Rationalist." because he was known for his rationalistic views.

The Advertiser, 23/6/14

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

NEW MEDICAL HEADQUARTERS.

A MEMORIAL TO LORD LISTER.

The new headquarters of the South Australian Medical Association were opened yesterday afternoon, and the hall was dedicated to the memory of Sir Charles Lister, K.C.B., by Dr. H. E. Abell, professor of pathology and dean of the Medical School of the University. The South Australian branch of the R.M.A. has secured the premises in conjunction with the staff of the hospital, and the University. The building is of the latest architectural style, and will provide an excellent headquarters for the medical profession in South Australia.

The opening ceremony was performed in the presence of Sir Charles Lister, who was accompanied by Dr. H. E. Abell, professor of pathology and dean of the Medical School of the University. The building is of the latest architectural style, and will provide an excellent headquarters for the medical profession in South Australia.

The Advertiser, 23/6/14