He gave me a slice of the legitimate annual sale, and making a calculation I found that about 10,000 copies of that song had been sold, apart from the sheet music.

"After the publication of 'The flight of ages' I wrote mainly for the firm of Boney and Co., and among others I wrote 'The mighty river' for Madame Clara Bula. I continued to supply the demand until I came to Adelaide at the invitation of the council of the University, in 1899, as I have told you, and on leaving London made contracts with certain firms to write a certain number of songs each year. My work has been on a large scale here, however, that I have never fully understood the difficulties. The songs have actually composed here are 'The gift divine,' 'When?' (for Madame Miles), 'When she was an Antoinette Trebelli,' and 'Sundays' (which was dedicated to Lily Tennyson). Then I did not do well in writing until I went home in 1904. While I was in London I sold out of my songs, notably 'Peg away' and 'Our Father.' They were the first I published. I am looking forward to another holiday trip some day, when I shall replenish the medical market. Altogether I have written about 200 songs, cannot write in Adelaide; I work too hard and cannot centre my thoughts and produce good work. My pupils take it out of me.

LOWDE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS.

Ichabod is not a word with which the average University undergraduate in New Zealand has much acquaintance. It is the Wellington correspondent of the 'Sydney Morning.' In future, however, he may reasonably think it is a name over hisintel. No longer will the student paralyse and wond'rously contemn, when the college bell rings, or the library doors open, or his friend asks that he 'doessth' in the college library. The word is afloat, and he is in the circumstances in the same position as if he were a fly in the presence of a wasp.

'Ichabod' has been written, as you know, in several different forms. The best is that which you find in the 'Wellington Daily News.' The student who is out of date will find it there. The word is afloat, and he is in the same position as if he were a fly in the presence of a wasp.

When the word is thrown at them, they will say that it is a word with which the average undergraduate has little acquaintance, and that it is a word which they have never heard of. But when they are in the same position as if they were a fly in the presence of a wasp, they will find it there.
