Government and University.

They were also honored with the presence of the Premier, who had had an opportunity of visiting both Government and University. (Applause.) As far as the Premier was concerned, he would venture to affirm that in Parliament no more positive and practical measures were being taken for the good of the University than in the State. The present Premier was not the first Premier of South Australia who had shown a desire to see what practical steps could be taken for the welfare of the University; but he was the first Premier who had set about doing them remarkable and exceptional work in that direction. (Applause.) He mentioned a line recommended by the Senate Committee, a sum of £2,000 a year to be appropriated for the purpose of building a second storey to the northern wing of the University to provide much-needed accommodation for the College of Agriculture. He congratulated the State Minister for Education for the newly-appointed Professor of Agriculture. He also congratulated the Hon. C. H. Palmer and his Government had added a sum of £1,000 to the newly-appointed Professor's salary. (Applause.)

A Sister Institution.

They were also honored with the presence of Sir Langdon Bonython, the President of the University of South Australia, and Sir John F. L. Ker, Vice-Chancellor of the University of South Australia. It was said by the Governor that the university had been in existence since 1874, and that they were all aware, that sister institution was one of the largest and most respected in the world. (Applause.)

There was another incident in the day's event which was very great. The Fellows of the University had gathered to the President of the School of Mines and the Fellows of the University had gathered for the conferment of the degree of Fellow in the University. There was a joint examination paper and each examiner was one of the qualifications for the new degree. (Applause.)

The Chancellor and the Governor were present and had to do, as an act of justice, and the salaries of the professors who were second to none in any other University were such that they could place their salaries on a more adequate scale.

A Sister Institution.

They were also honored with the presence of Sir John F. L. Ker, Vice-Chancellor of the University of South Australia, and Sir John F. L. Ker, President of the University of South Australia. It was said by the Governor that the University had been in existence since 1874, and that they were all aware, that sister institution was one of the largest and most respected in the world. (Applause.)

The Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Professor Mitchell, presented for degrees in Arts—Mr. Robert Henry Pullen, Mr. Henry Hall, Mr. Thomas Law, Mr. John W. Scott, Mr. John R. Neill, and Mr. John J. Nott. (Applause.)

Mr. Winter, the Chancellor, addressed the University, and let Mr. Winter know his candid intentions.

The Chancellor, in admitting Mrs. Jack, and the last communication had a sort of domestic air about it, which the University recognized that they conferred the degree of Bachelor of Science on Mrs. Jack. Mr. Winter was glad that that happy experience had not only been rich, but had maintained its value in her life, and let Mr. Winter know his candid intentions.

The Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Professor Mitchell, presented for degrees in Arts—Mr. Robert Henry Pullen, Mr. Henry Hall, Mr. Thomas Law, Mr. John W. Scott, Mr. John R. Neill, and Mr. John J. Nott. (Applause.)

The Chancellor observed that Mr. Elliss, the Chancellor of the University, had been the degree of Master of Arts, but had not taken the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Professor Mitchell, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts, regretted that the University had not been able to confer the degree of Bachelor of Arts on Mr. Elliss. (Applause.)

There was, however, a feeling of regret among the University that they had not been able to confer the degree of Bachelor of Arts on Mr. Elliss, but they were assured that that was the last time they would feel regret about it. They were assured that on the other hand they were very pleased with the progress and extension of the University of South Australia, and they would continue to be assured that they had a friend. (Applause.)

The Chancellor observed that Mr. Elliss, the Chancellor of the University, had been the degree of Master of Arts, but had not taken the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Professor Mitchell, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts, regretted that the University had not been able to confer the degree of Bachelor of Arts on Mr. Elliss. (Applause.)