UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS.

To the Editor,

Sir,— Probably the council of the University will meet before the year is out, and it is to be hoped that the question of altering the date of the primary examination will be duly considered. The decision of the Education Department to have all examinations at the end of the year was one which, I suppose, was made with the best intentions, but it has given rise to much complaint. The University is in the habit of having examinations in December, November, and October, and it is not easy to find a date which will suit the majority of students. The present date, which is the last week in October, is found to be inconvenient by a large number of students, and it is to be hoped that the council will consider the matter carefully.

Yours faithfully,
