THE ADELAIDE UNIVERSITY

ANNUAL BALL.

"Wax hard and play hard" is evidently the motto of our Adelaide University. By the time thewick or success is allowed means rare, stamping the students as worthy future citizens. In higher vein, the "Black Book," in the hammer or success, as well as the friendly and the thoroughness. A happy illustration comes at the annual ball, an event that satisfies the sportive students of the Adelaide University Sports Association, which was held on Thursday evening, and for perfection of detail and chasm of procedure would be very hard to equal.

The ball is one of our principal winter functions. It is the debaters' paradise, the students' opportunity to meet the guests from other universities, and perhaps the most picturesque scene of the year. The program was elaborated by the management, and the success of it was instantaneous. The arrangements were on the usual lines, and the room was completely filled.

As one entered the Elder Hall, the notice was that of a great meeting. The hall was pleasantly warm, and the decorative scheme, in rich scarlet, was carried out to the end. The Elder Hall, in repose so to say, was in brilliant and festive array. The guests took their places, and the room became the center of the city, ready to affect the day's proceedings. The debaters were all present, and the dance was in full swing.

Next was the dance, a most successful one, and the dance continued until the last guest had left. The music, also, was excellent. The ball was a great success, and the guests were all highly pleased. The program was well carried out, and the ball was a great success.
