HIGHER EDUCATION.

"NOT FOR SCHOOL, BUT FOR LIFE."

Mr. Albert Mangeside, M.A., founder and Secretary of the Women's National Association of England, accompanied by the President of the Women's National Association of Australia (Miss B. M. Mangeside) and the President of the University of Adelaide (Miss Ada Mangeside), visited the Adelaide High School on Tuesday morning last, at the request of the headmaster, who conducted them through every part of the school. The rooms and afterwards introduced them to the students assembled in the large hall. Vigorous addresses were delivered by the students.

The Premier said the people of the State were proud of the various fine public buildings in Adelaide, but in connection with the high school, the Governor was looking forward to the erection of an edifice which would not be bricks and mortar, but create the impression that the mind was a thing to be cultivated. The Government intended to give the people of South Australia the best school in Australia, and they were at the cost of providing it, considering it the greatest public service they could do. The Government considered it the most important thing to be done at the present time. The Governor was glad to be at the school that morning to have an opportunity of seeing for himself the facilities provided for the boys and girls of Australia. Australia was a wonderful country, and he hoped it would do its best to live up to its hopes. He thought that the best things Australia would do would be done by those who had been educated in the best schools in the world. The Government was going to do its best to make Australia a great country.

The Governor said that he was glad to be at the school that morning to have the opportunity of seeing for himself the facilities provided for the boys and girls of Australia. Australia was a wonderful country, and he hoped it would do its best to live up to its hopes. He thought that the best things Australia would do would be done by those who had been educated in the best schools in the world. The Government was going to do its best to make Australia a great country.

Mr. Mangeside concluded with a stirring address, which was enthusiastically applauded by the students.

NOT FOR SCHOOL, BUT FOR LIFE.

Mr. Albert Mangeside, M.A., founder and Secretary of the Women's National Association of England, accompanied by the President of the Women's National Association of Australia (Miss B. M. Mangeside) and the President of the University of Adelaide (Miss Ada Mangeside), visited the Adelaide High School on Tuesday morning last, at the request of the headmaster, who conducted them through every part of the school. The rooms and afterwards introduced them to the students assembled in the large hall. Vigorous addresses were delivered by the students.

The Premier said the people of the State were proud of the various fine public buildings in Adelaide, but in connection with the high school, the Governor was looking forward to the erection of an edifice which would not be bricks and mortar, but create the impression that the mind was a thing to be cultivated. The Government intended to give the people of South Australia the best school in Australia, and they were at the cost of providing it, considering it the greatest public service they could do. The Government considered it the most important thing to be done at the present time. The Governor was glad to be at the school that morning to have an opportunity of seeing for himself the facilities provided for the boys and girls of Australia. Australia was a wonderful country, and he hoped it would do its best to live up to its hopes. He thought that the best things Australia would do would be done by those who had been educated in the best schools in the world. The Government was going to do its best to make Australia a great country.

The Governor said that he was glad to be at the school that morning to have the opportunity of seeing for himself the facilities provided for the boys and girls of Australia. Australia was a wonderful country, and he hoped it would do its best to live up to its hopes. He thought that the best things Australia would do would be done by those who had been educated in the best schools in the world. The Government was going to do its best to make Australia a great country.