A Great Statesman.

Mr. Bryce Welcomed.

The Melbourne Express which brought to Adelaide the Right Hon. Sir John Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, arrived yesterday, and it was not until 11 o'clock on Monday that the distinguished visitor stepped out of the first-class carriage. Some who had gone earlier to welcome him found that they had been too early, for the本领 train arrived, but there was a good crowd of journalists, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce travelled by special train, and at the end of the express the train had some difficulty in finding the station.

The Pen Picture.

One of the first to welcome Mr. Bryce was the Premier of South Australia, Sir George Grey, although the visit of Sir John Bryce was, at the outset, accompanied by much comment on the difficulties of the occasion. Sir John Bryce was met by a large party, and after some difficulty in finding the station, he was conducted to his hotel. The visit of Sir John Bryce was not only a great honor to the State, but it was also a matter of great public interest.

Concerning Adelaide.

Sir Samuel Way remarked that Mr. Bryce was the most distinguished man living in the City of Adelaide. They were in South Australia, and his Excellency had appeared on the scene with great desire, and in the City of Adelaide there were some points in which Adelaide led the van in front of some of its contemporaries. For one thing, Adelaide, he added, had managed to have the privilege of municipal rights and privileges for 70 years, whereas in some parts of the City of Melbourne, the bond which united the people had not been as strong. Adelaide was also much more important in the minds of the people, and its influence was greater.

The Premier extended a hearty welcome on behalf of the Government and the people of South Australia. In the absence of the Governor, Sir John Bryce was welcomed by Mr. G. F. Fuller, the Mayor of Adelaide, and Mr. G. F. Fuller, the Clerk of the City of Adelaide, and Mr. W. H. Horne, the Principal of the Adelaide University.

National Ideals and Aims.

Address at the Civic Welcome.

The distinguished visitor was tendered a visit to the State, and he was received by the community, and the prominent members of every section of the community. The greeting was met with the hearty applause of the crowd. The Mayor, Mr. J. H. Boon (the leader of the Council), the President of the House of Assembly (Hon. T. L. O'Leary), the President of the House of Representatives (Hon. T. J. Gollan), and Mr. J. T. Gell, the Clerk of the Council, welcomed Mr. Bryce. The visit was an occasion for the people of South Australia to show their appreciation of the visit of Sir John Bryce to the State.

The Pen Picture.

On the occasion of the visit of Sir John Bryce to the City of Adelaide, there were some points in which Adelaide led the van in front of some of its contemporaries. For one thing, Adelaide had managed to have the privilege of municipal rights and privileges for 70 years, whereas in some parts of the City of Melbourne, the bond which united the people had not been as strong. Adelaide was also much more important in the minds of the people, and its influence was greater.

The Premier extended a hearty welcome on behalf of the Government and the people of South Australia. In the absence of the Governor, Sir John Bryce was welcomed by Mr. G. F. Fuller, the Mayor of Adelaide, and Mr. G. F. Fuller, the Clerk of the City of Adelaide, and Mr. W. H. Horne, the Principal of the Adelaide University.

National Ideals and Aims.

Address at the Civic Welcome.

The distinguished visitor was tendered a visit to the State, and he was received by the community, and the prominent members of every section of the community. The greeting was met with the hearty applause of the crowd. The Mayor, Mr. J. H. Boon (the leader of the Council), the President of the House of Assembly (Hon. T. L. O'Leary), the President of the House of Representatives (Hon. T. J. Gollan), and Mr. J. T. Gell, the Clerk of the Council, welcomed Mr. Bryce. The visit was an occasion for the people of South Australia to show their appreciation of the visit of Sir John Bryce to the State.

The Pen Picture.

On the occasion of the visit of Sir John Bryce to the City of Adelaide, there were some points in which Adelaide led the van in front of some of its contemporaries. For one thing, Adelaide had managed to have the privilege of municipal rights and privileges for 70 years, whereas in some parts of the City of Melbourne, the bond which united the people had not been as strong. Adelaide was also much more important in the minds of the people, and its influence was greater.