WHAT IS EDUCATION?

UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC LIFE.

SYLLABUS ADDRESS
BY MR. BRYCE.

Melbourne, July 15.

The Right Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, delivered a reception by the Chancellor, the professional staff, and the undergraduates of the Melbourne University this afternoon. Only Mr. Bryce was accompanied by Mrs. Bryce, who was received at the entrance to Wilson Hall by the Chancellor (Mr. Hone), and conducted to a seat on the dais. There was a large gathering, and the distinguished visitor had much to say in speaking with cheers and the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow."

An address to Mr. Bryce was read to the Chancellor in welcoming the visitor. It was as follows:

"Among the distinguished persons whom this University has been privileged to welcome from all parts of the world, few can claim such an admittance as yours, for you are a visitor of such wide experience, and have passed through so many phases of life. The influence of your presence is bound to be felt, and will be of the highest value to all who are associated with the University."

Mr. Bryce, in replying, expressed thanks for the compliment paid him. He said he had come to the University because he was interested in the work of the University, and because he had been asked to speak. He believed the University was doing a great work, and he was glad to be associated with it. He was glad to be able to help in any way he could, and he was glad to see the University growing and prospering.

Mr. Bryce then delivered an address, in which he spoke of the importance of education, and of the role of universities in the promotion of learning. He spoke of the need for universities to be open to all, and to provide opportunities for all who wish to learn. He spoke of the importance of science and scholarship, and of the need for universities to be places of knowledge and discovery. He spoke of the importance of universities in the promotion of democracy and social justice.

Mr. Bryce's address was well received, and was greeted with great enthusiasm. The Chancellor expressed his gratitude to Mr. Bryce for his speech, and for his support of the University. The audience was greatly impressed by Mr. Bryce's speech, and were grateful for his support.

Later in the afternoon, Mr. Bryce and Mrs. Bryce attended a reception given in their honor by the Chancellor and the University. The reception was a great success, and Mr. Bryce was much honored by his reception. He was received with great enthusiasm, and was greeted with much praise and admiration.

Mr. Bryce's visit to the University was a great success, and was greatly enjoyed by all who were privileged to have the opportunity to meet him. He was received with great enthusiasm, and was greeted with much praise and admiration.
