THE UNIVERSITY.

ANNUAL COMMENORATION.

DEGREES CONFERRED.

The annual commemoration of the University of Adelaide was held in the Elder Hall on Monday afternoon. The attendance was very large, and the Chancellor (Sir Henry Gwyllie Way) presided. The members of the senate and the council proceeded to the platform in the following order: the Chair of the University, the Rector of the Conservatorium; lecturers; professor; the registrar of the council and members of the Senate; and the Vic-Chancellor and Chancellor. His Excellency, the Governor (Sir Henry Gwyllie Way) attended, and his speech was delivered by the Chairman. The National Anthem was sung, and the Rev. Mr. Blewitt and Mr. Connolly addressed the gathering. The speeches were then read, and the Vice-Chancellor made a short address, which was followed by the Rev. Mr. Blewitt's address. The Rev. Mr. Blewitt then delivered a discourse on the subject of education, and the Rev. Mr. Connolly addressed the students. The last part of the meeting was occupied by the presentation of medals and diplomas to the students.

The ceremony concluded with the presentation of a scroll to the Chancellor, and the Vice-Chancellor, and the Chancellor, and the Chancellor's address was read. The meeting then adjourned.

A large number of the students were present, and the proceedings were marked by a great deal of interest and attention. The speeches were well delivered, and the students were most attentive. The meeting was concluded with a vote of thanks to the Chancellor and the Vice-Chancellor.
The Governor welcomed. The Chancellor said his first duty was to give Sir Henry Gawley a cordial and loyal welcome as a representative of the Crown Royal. He had, he said, been making history so far during the great war that they were going to write the story in their history books, but they did not forget that one of the first to volunteer and give up his life before the war was his Excellency. (Applause.) Their patriotic ardor and their loyalty had been shown in the way that they had shown their duty as self-sacrificing and patriotic citizens. (Applause.)

The Governor then took his seat, and the Chancellor delivered his address. He said if he was asked to name a body of men who were destined to be remembered for their work in the great war, he would not hesitate to name the men of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge his own alma mater. It was a fact that the professors of these universities had set an example, and other universities in the Commonwealth had followed their lead in teaching the same lesson. As Australians, and as citizens of the Commonwealth, they had to show their gratitude to those who had given their lives for the war. (Applause.)

The Chancellor then gave a detailed account of the services of the university during the war, and the great work that had been done by the staff and students. Professor Brown, the chemical department Professor Rennie, and the staff of the university had taken an active part in the war effort, and had been responsible for the manufacture of munitions and the production of food. (Applause.)

Professor Brown had written a series of valuable articles on the war, and he had been a constant contributor to the war efforts. (Applause.)

The message of the University to the people was "Come to us". The University had always been ready to give its services to the community, and had always done so. (Applause.)

In Memory Green.

On such a memorable occasion they could not forget all their sacrifices. The brave and self-sacrificing men who had given their lives for the country should be remembered. (Applause.)

No doubt Professor Bragg's words would be remembered. (Applause.)

The Governor then concluded his address, and the meeting adjourned.
