Mr. van Senden also dealt with the production of Australian wool. He went to London in 1888, where he examined the finest qualities of wool, weighing 20 lbs. It was a valuable contribution to the Australian wool market, a total of £326 of 11s. Last year, the export was £1,800,000, which was a significant increase from previous years. The value of exports directly due to wool was £375,000, or more than 45 per cent of Australia's total exports. Consequently, the wool purchased from Mr. Peppin was £225,000,797 for its wool. Australia stood third in the countries of the world in the amount of wool it produced, followed by China and the United States. The average weight of the wool was 70 lbs, which was slightly lower than the previous year. The price of wool fluctuated throughout the year, with the lowest price of 20 shillings per cwt and the highest price of 33 shillings per cwt. The quality of the wool was also significant, with 70 per cent of the wool being equal to or better than the best quality of wool. The wool was used for various purposes, such as the manufacture of clothing, blankets, and carpets. The wool-producing areas of Australia were divided into two regions: the eastern and western regions. The eastern region, including Victoria and New South Wales, produced 60 per cent of the total wool, while the western region, including South Australia and Western Australia, produced 40 per cent of the total wool. The wool-producing areas were extensively irrigated and fertilized, which improved the quality of the wool. The wool-producing areas were also protected by trade agreements with other countries, which ensured a steady supply of wool. UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND EMBRACE.

To the Editor,
Sir,—University students, like other men, have patriotic feelings, and would like to fight for the Motherland; but, instead of their receiving encouragement from certain University authorities, they have received negative and hostile messages. Among the other colonial universities, the Adelaide University has made no concessions to its students, and the press has been very critical.

A number of graduates have been voluntarily discharged, and are going with the expeditionary force. Some have even expressed a desire to serve in the field, not only financially, but this year’s examination are going to be given by the Adelaide University. If they would follow the lead of the other State institutions in granting concessions to students who wish to volunteer, I am, Sir, yours,

UNDERGRAD.

THE CASE OF MR. ELKAN.

In the House of Assembly on Tuesday afternoon Mr. Ponder gave notice that he would follow the following day, and suggested to Mr. E. Elkan, a naturalised British subject, that he was so near to his heart as to be called a letter in the press, urging him to return his seat. Is this not an act of disloyalty to Great Britain? Are we to take similar actions without similar consequences? Is it the intention of the Government to take similar action in deporting or penalising Mr. Elkan for his seat? Is it the intention of the Government to uphold the names of places which indicate that they belong to a foreign enemy? If such names and borders, Mr. Elkan, said Mr. Ponder, were instanced, “Do you suggest that the Government should be required to take similar action?” Mr. Ponder, he asked, “what would be the result?”
UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND THE D.O.A.O.

Mr. C. R. Hodge, Registrar of the University, wrote to the Register on Wednesday last, informing us that he had received a letter from the University Senate, advising him that the University had received a petition from students who wished to join the expeditionary forces. The petition was forwarded to the council, and the council decided to take steps to ensure that all eligible undergraduate students who wished to do so would be able to join the expeditionary forces.

The council resolved that, under certain conditions, it would be necessary for students to be called upon for service. A special committee was appointed to prepare the regulations and to ensure that all students received fair treatment. The council also stated that the conditions for being called upon for service would include a minimum age requirement and a minimum academic standing.

The council further stated that, in order to comply with the conditions of the D.O.A.O., it would be necessary for the University to have a list of students who were eligible for service. The council also stated that it would be necessary for the University to have a list of students who were not eligible for service.
