THE UNIVERSITY AND THE WORKERS.

In connection with the lecture to be delivered by van Senden to the members of the University Society of Economics on "The wool industry of Australia" on Monday evening at the University, a cordial invitation has been extended to the members of the Workers' Educational Association to attend. The subject should be of interest to students of both the University and the W.E.A., and a large attendance is anticipated. At the present time it seems as though the University and the masses and working class have found a common ground to meet and discuss the problems of mutual assistance and national defence, it is gratifying to see the harmonious relationship, with which the University and the masses are working towards the same end. The door of the University are open to the W.E.A. students whenever it is considered that the subjects dealt with are likely to attract enthusiastic students. The lecture by Professor Portus on Friday afternoon at the Prince of Wales Theatre in the University will also be attended by a number of W.E.A. students.

ECONOMIC HISTORY

THE MANORIAL SYSTEM.

The second lecture of a course entitled "Economic History of England" was delivered by Acting Professor Portus in the University on Friday.

The lecturer, who dealt more particularly with the economic condition of the modern manorial system, and that the value of the manorial system was due to political and economic factors working together. The Norman Conquest did not bring in any new elements, but as a result of the century in which the feudal system was imposed, the manorial system soon developed. Feudalism was a rather unnecessary addition to the farming system. The manorial system continued to exist until the modern period. It was abolished in the seventeenth century. The manorial system in all its respects similar to the estate of the modern English squire. The theory of land tenure was entirely different, and wages were practically absent from medieval days. There was no rent in the form of money. Little pasture farming, and what pasture farming there was worked on as almost a communal basis. There was a tendency for the free serf and the unfree serf to coalesce with the unfree. There was an absence of any competition in the farming labor. Old customs prevailed and ruled all. This discouraged individualism and lessened the chance of progress. The villages did not set about producing supplies for all other villages. All were independent. There was no exchange. The manorial system was a permanent of village life. Communications to other centres were bad.
AMUSEMENTS.

University Choral Class.

The University Choral Class gave their annual concert at the Elder Hall last night to a large audience, which was greatly interested. The programme consisted of Drorov's intense dramatic cantata, "The Spectre's Bride," and Wesley's exciting motet, "Ex in exitibus." The complete with voices of distinction in every part, produced a remarkable effect. The conductorship of Mr. Frederick Byas was the most striking feature of the performance. The accompaniment was well done, and the concert was a great success.

The cantata is written for four soloists, a full choir, and orchestra. The parts are considerably difficult and require great skill and artistry. The performers acquitted themselves very well, and the audience was greatly pleased.

The soloists were Misses Hilda Wheeler, Misses M. and E. R. Correll, and Misses H. and M. F. Bower. The last-named placed the cantata in a light and graceful manner, and the audience was greatly pleased with her singing.

The performance was given in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience, and was received with great applause. The concert was a great success, and the performers were well received.

The University Choral Class is a very successful society, and the performers are to be congratulated on their excellent work. The concert was a great success, and the audience was greatly pleased with the performance.
THE WOOL INDUSTRY.

A GOLDEN FUTURE.

LECTURE BY MR. VAN SENDEN.

At the University on Monday evening, Mr. E. W. van Senden delivered a variable address before the Economic Society. "The wool industry in Australia," he told his hearers, "is one of the most important, over which Professor Mitchell presided.

Mr. van Senden said these were frequent. The wool of sheep in the Bible, they being the first domesticated animals, were records of sheep. There was no domestication of parts of the world. They were of very little consequence. They were kept for their wool, and the quality of their fleece. The sheep were known to have existed in the elevated mountainsChinains on the plains of Panar, 11,000 ft., above sea level, and in the Tiens Shan Ranges of China, by Colonel Gordon, measuring up to 19 ft. high, and with horns 48 in. from tip to tip. The domestic sheep, and butted like the wild species, was without doubt the species of the goat tribe. The domestic sheep was without doubt the same species as the goat, and both were without doubt the wild species. The first introduction of the sheep to the Greeks, and from the Greeks to the Romans, was not a matter of record.
