A WOMAN COUNCILLOR

It is appropriate that the University of Adelaide, the first in Australia to grant degrees to women, should have a woman representative in its governing body. The former step was authorized when most other universities in Australia had been founded, and it was not until 1909 that the Council of the University appointed its first woman graduate. Graduates—including those recognized on account of having taken degrees elsewhere—and the roll of women graduates is well into three figures. To be directly represented on the Council is, however, quite another thing. Dr. Helen Mayo is a brilliant member of a clever family, whose names figure largely in the University role, made her first attempt at election last November; and The Register at the time attributed her defeat to the occasion being ill-assisted. If Dr. Mayo had been elected then she would have distinguished herself as a member of the Council, and naturally the majority declined to act so arbitrarily. The resignation of Professor Lewis has now afforded her and the large body of women graduates a chance which was promptly accepted. Her candidature was in the circumstances too formalistic to be refused, and her election, if it could be suggested, Mr. T. Ryan's defeat under these conditions in no sense dishonour him; and other chances will come. Adelaide University has always prided itself on going outside the mere "dominist" element, and selecting for its Council a proportion of persons experienced, a man, and a woman so simple and so sensible is not likely to fall into disuse.

Dr. Helen Mary Mayo was, at a meeting of the Senate of the University on Wednesday afternoon, the retiring President, and the vacancy caused in the Council by the retirement of Professor Lewis. Dr. Mayo, a graduate of the University, and has been a regular member of the Council. She is a daughter of Mr. George Mayo, for many years Secretary of the University, and the only child of the late Dr. Mayo. Dr. Helen Mayo is one of the leading figures in the university, and has been a woman graduate, and an active member of the council. She held the office of President of the University, and subsequently devoted five years to her medical course, taking the degree of Bachelor of Medicine. She was the first woman surgeon at the Adelaide Hospital, and was subsequently appointed to the staff of the Royal Children's Hospital, and was in a responsible position from the very inception of the hospital.

At a meeting of the Senate of the University on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Barlow, C.M.G., (Vice-Chancellor) was complimented upon his recent honour. Mr. Barlow briefly replied to the felicitous congratulation.

Mr. Harold Berwick was the guest of Professor Ennis at the Elder Conservatorium on Wednesday afternoon, and received a cordial welcome, paid a high tribute to the building Australian, on whose plan were the works of Mr. and Mrs. Windsor Hall, Mr. Frederik Hever, Ken. Kohnstall, and Mr. J. Hume.

CHAMBER MUSIC.

The first concert of chamber music for the 1924 session was given by the Elder Conservatorium last night in the presence of a satisfied audience. The programme was presented, and the room was filled to highly complimentary manner. The audience of the company was—Mrs. E. G. Reuss (pianoforte), Miss H. M. Peters (cello), Miss M. Dixon (violin), Mr. P. F. Bevan (violoncello), Mr. J. J. Blomfield (cello), and Miss M. Beban (violin). The items consisted of—Beethoven's Allegro con fuoco (Hummel), string quartet in F (Mozart), and quintette for piano, violin, and viola. Each item was rendered in excellent style, and the audience found it to be of great satisfaction. They expressed their thanks to the performers for their kind attention and the appreciation of the performance was shown by the applause of the audience.

Sir Samuel Way left Sydney on Monday by the express on his way back to Adelaide. He will stay in Melbourne to-night, and return on Tuesday. Sir Samuel Way, a well known lawyer of national eminence, has spent the last few years in London, where he was a member of the British Parliament. He has returned home, and is expected to be back in Adelaide on Thursday morning.

Sir Samuel Way's Welcome.

Astonishing Recovery.

Sir Samuel Way, the Chief Justice of South Australia, returned to Adelaide yesterday morning after a hospital visit in Sydney. He is welcomed home with much joy by the people of the city. It was a wonderful recovery from an operation that was considered a serious one. Sir Samuel Way was operated on last week in Sydney, and was expected to be paralyzed for a few months. But he showed a remarkable resistance to the operation, and was able to return home on Sunday. Sir Samuel Way's return to Adelaide was greeted with enthusiasm by the people of the city, and was considered a great event. He was received with cheering by a large crowd of people who lined the streets to welcome him home.

Sir Samuel Way stepped out of the hospital with a bandage on his head and a cast on his arm. He was in high spirits, and his face showed the joy of his recovery. His return was a great event for the people of the city, and was considered a great achievement. Sir Samuel Way was received with cheers and applause by the crowd, and was welcomed home with great joy. His return was considered a great event for the city, and was greeted with much joy.
