The late Captain N. Shielaw.

News has been received in Adelaide that Captain N. Shielaw, L.R.C.P. & S., L.P.S. & S., F.R.C.S., died in Paris, France, 33 years ago. He was born in Adelaide, a son of Mr. J. K. Shielaw and Miss M. J. Shielaw, of Hindley-street. Captain Shielaw was educated at the Adelaide University, and the Edinburgh University, and was a surgeon in the British Army during the war. In 1915, he was appointed a captain in the Royal Army Medical Corps.

He served in France, where he was killed in action in 1916. He was posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross for his bravery in the field. His body was returned to Adelaide for burial.

Captain Shielaw was a respected and well-liked member of the medical community in Adelaide and his death was mourned by many.

In his memory, a fund was established to provide scholarships for medical students at the University of Adelaide. The fund is still active today and continues to support medical education in the city.
WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

The first tutorial class organized by the Workers' Educational Association at the University on Tuesday evening, when about 250 members of the University and other workers attended the meeting. Professor A. J. Huxley, M.A., director of tutorial classes at the University, was present. A pleasant feature of the meeting was the display of exhibits by the members of the association.

The subject of the evening was "The Economic Aspects of the Division of Labor," and the discussion was conducted by Mr. J. W. Huxley, M.A., who gave an excellent account of the history of the division of labor and its economic aspects.

Mr. Huxley stated that the division of labor was first developed in ancient times, and that it was only in recent times that it became systematic and widespread. He pointed out that the division of labor has helped to increase the efficiency of production, but it has also led to the development of a class of workers who are dependent on the system for their livelihood.

Mr. Huxley also discussed the effects of the division of labor on the worker. He pointed out that the worker is often deprived of the opportunity to use his full abilities, and that the work is often rendered monotonous and meaningless. He suggested that the division of labor should be reformed so that the worker is given the opportunity to develop his full potential.

Mr. Huxley concluded his address by emphasizing the importance of education in the improvement of the working class. He said that the workers should be encouraged to obtain education and to develop their full potential. He said that only through education can the workers gain the knowledge and skills necessary to improve their condition.

The meeting was adjourned after a most interesting discussion, and the members of the association were invited to continue the discussion at future meetings.

Mr. Huxley said that the association would continue to hold meetings on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. in the University Hall, and that all workers were invited to attend.

The members of the association were also invited to bring their friends, and to join the association.

THE FUTURE OF NORTH TERRACE.

Disposition of Vacant Land.

The difficulty with North Terrace is that it is neither long enough nor deep enough. All the great educational institutions are asking for smaller rooms to spread, and to stretch their arms, which have already been stretched in the old days. The most optimistic ideas of South Australia's progress and its potentialities have been realized. The Government has had to throw some of its own departments away from the heart of Adelaide to open spaces of the hill slopes. There may be more important charges yet. They will be taken up by the local authorities, which are central administrative bodies. It is important that the Government will lose sight of the necessity of maintaining the University in the same position as it was in 1924. There is a question of the University's development as a separate institution. The Government is the University's director, and a separate University Board has been asked to work out the policies of the University. These historical and social reasons are given to support the Government's decision. However, the decision of the Government, which is as yet only a draft, is not in agreement with the Premier's views.

No information is available regarding the future of the area. It will be made up of the addition of land to the north of the Parliament House. The Government's attitude is not likely to be changed, and the Premier's views are not even mentioned. A public meeting has been called for October 17th, to be held at the South Australian Art Hall. The Premier's attitude is expected to be discussed at the meeting. It is expected that the Government's position will be clarified and that the Premier's views will be taken into consideration.

The Royal Commission has been tasked with investigating the disposal of the area. The Commission is expected to report in the near future. It is hoped that the decision of the Government will not be affected by the Royal Commission's findings. The Commission's findings are expected to be made public in the near future. It is hoped that the decision of the Government will not be affected by the Royal Commission's findings.
The services of Mr. Gerald Wallem as a teacher of the violin have been secured by the Elder Conservatorium. Mr. Wallem is a brother of Mr. Herbert Wallem, A.R.C.O., violinist, and of Mr. Arthur Wallem, the noted baritone and teacher of singing. Mr. G. Wallem is well known in Australia and has a reputation in music, being a son of Mr. William Wallem, F.R.S.A., the well-known scientific writer, who is expected to arrive in Adelaide at an early date.

The appointment of Mr. Gerald Wallem to the position of teacher of the violin at the Elder Conservatorium, was the subject of a statement by the Director (Mr. E. E. Emms) on Saturday. He remarked that the death of Mr. Eugene Alderman, the violinist, who had accomplished excellent work at the Conservatorium, made a further appointment necessary. Dr. Emms wrote privately to an authority on music, stating:—

To the Director of the Elder Conservatorium.

I am writing to you privately about Mr. Wallem, as one of the most prominent violinists in the city. I am pleased to hear that he is coming here, and I am sure that his presence will be a great addition to the Conservatorium. If you have any further information about him, please let me know.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Emms

Mr. Gerald Wallem arrive in Adelaide at the end of May or the beginning of June. Mr. Wallem was a student of Violin at the Elder Conservatorium from 1925 to 1935, and he won all the honors within his reach. The principal of that institution, Mr. Herbert Wallem, has a very high opinion of his talents. Since leaving the academy Mr. Wallem has distinguished himself as a solo violinist. He has toured with Madame Melba, and has been heard by audiences in the United States and Canada. He enjoyed the honor of playing as a soloist under the direction of the famous conductor. An older brother, who died at an early age, was a baritone, and another brother, Mr. Herbert Wallem, is a noted violinist. Gerald Wallem organised a string quartet about 1935, and Dr. Emms entertains the hope that he will form and conduct a similar combination in Adelaide. When the subject was discussed with Mr. Herbert Wallem, the Director of the Elder Conservatorium, he remarked:—"If Mr. Wallem comes to Adelaide, Adelaide will be a very fortunate city."
The University Council, at a meeting on Friday, awarded the Bander prize to Mr. E. M. E. Bander for his very good work entitled "The History of the University of Sydney". The prize was presented by Mr. R. E. E. Bander, the director of the Department of University Extension, and the address was delivered by Mr. A. M. E. Bander, the author of the book. The address was followed by a discussion on the importance of university education in the modern world. The discussion was led by Mr. J. E. E. Bander, the chancellor of the university, and Mr. A. M. E. Bander, the provost of the university. The discussion concluded with a vote of thanks to the speaker who had given an illuminating and enlightening address.
