A Promise and a Condition

The Premier (Mr. Lawson) said, in reply, that the Ministry had determined to do the job. (Hear, hear.) But it will not make a free gift. The Ministry will not be responsible for $100,000, or it may be $200,000, for buildings. The work will be signed over within three years. This money cannot be found out of revenue. We have no means of raising it. We have inspected the University and we are not in favour of conditions. There we are far behind New South Wales. We have no reason to go into that. The total endowments of the three universities of Australia are at Sydney $4,578. Melbourne $2,867. Adelaide $2,615. It is far better to have very many University graduates who may call it a war纪念. I ask the Government to consider the proposal of $50,000 to $100,000. I think that ought to be done. I think that ought to be part of the condition of finding the $300,000. If you give us the money, you will not have to give the Union building, which is so essential to the work of the University. The rest can be used for scholarships and bursaries. I think that ought to be a very good condition, as was done in New South Wales.

Mr. A. M. Henderson said that architecture was one of the oldest and most necessary sciences in which the University should be extended as widely as possible. The Premier (Mr. Lawson) said he had not dealt with the new courses of study asked for, and the Premier (Mr. Lawson) said he had not dealt with the new courses of study asked for, and he would not say more about it.

Mr. John G. was then called to order.

TRAINING IN ARCHITECTURE

"I feel sure that, before long the time will come when the Government of the University will be more conscious of the value of higher education and the need for training in architecture. The University of Adelaide is the only University in Australia that has a course of study in architecture.

Professor Osborne, president of the University Senate, said that the position of the University had been under discussion for some time. The Premier (Mr. Lawson) had spoken of the need for a new building, and the University Council had decided to proceed with the building.

Mr. J. E. Wilson, the Minister for Education, said that the University of Adelaide had been asked to undertake work for the construction of a new building on the University grounds. It was hoped that the Government would contribute $50,000, but the University would be responsible for the balance.

The amount of $125,000 was to be paid to the University for the construction of the new building.

SAINTS' DAY

Mr. M. M. Magahan

to have returned on Saturday next, conditionally upon being able to obtain a position. Mr. Magahan was one of the graduates of the University who had obtained a position in the University. The Premier (Mr. Lawson) said that Mr. Magahan had been appointed to the position. The position was an honorary one, but Mr. Magahan was expected to attend at the University on Saturday.
