IN PARIS.

ARMISTICE DAY CELEBRATIONS.

By Capt. N. V. Wallace, A Company, 4th Battalion.

It was my good fortune to be on leave in Paris on Armistice Day, when the German delegates signed the peace terms. It was one of the most memorable days of my life. I arrived in Paris about 10 October. I made my way to the Hotel Royal, where a large mob of Americans, Spaniards, French, and others, were all gathered in front of the Palace of Justice. The whole street was thronged with people, and the atmosphere was charged with excitement. The German delegates were then brought in, and the Peace Treaty was signed.

For France—

After dinner we went out once more to see the sights. In the glory of their once-lit lanterns, the Nieuwland girls themselves up in a spirit of wild abandon to their own, and looking over the grand boulevard, now bright as day in the glare of the great arc lamps, one could see nothing but a swirling, cheering, singing, and rejoicing crowd. The sight was beautiful, and the delight in the downfall of the dirty Boche was almost beyond expression. It was a sight that we shall never forget.

There were two large bands playing, and the music was in full swing. The crowd was enthusiastic.

-Naval Surrender.

SOUTH AUSTRALIANS PRESENT.

These days are to be remembered by all the Allied forces. The day was a day of rejoicing. The whole population was out, and the streets were filled with people. The flags were flying, and the bands were playing. The men were dancing, and the women were singing. The atmosphere was charged with excitement and joy.

-Naval Surrender.

SOUTH AUSTRALIANS PRESENT.

These days are to be remembered by all the Allied forces. The day was a day of rejoicing. The whole population was out, and the streets were filled with people. The flags were flying, and the bands were playing. The men were dancing, and the women were singing. The atmosphere was charged with excitement and joy.

-Naval Surrender.

SOUTH AUSTRALIANS PRESENT.

These days are to be remembered by all the Allied forces. The day was a day of rejoicing. The whole population was out, and the streets were filled with people. The flags were flying, and the bands were playing. The men were dancing, and the women were singing. The atmosphere was charged with excitement and joy.