DEATH OF MR. P. A. HOWELLS.

A LOSS TO THE MUSICAL WORLD.

Widespread regret will be caused, particularly in musical circles, by the announcement of the death of Mr. Philip Arthur Howells, which occurred yesterday. Mr. Howells had been a member of the Adelphi Concerts, and had held an unrivalled place in the affections and esteem of those with whom he had to deal. He was a man of many parts, being at once a musician, a composer, and an encyclopaedia of South Australian music.

The first artist he received was Madame Angelica Goddard, a celebrated musician, who watched the development of Adelaide's musical culture with keen attention, and it was through him that the town latterly: The Advertiser was founded.

Mr. Howells' birthplace was in South London, England, and he was educated at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He was a student of the famous composer, Sir Charles Mackerras, and was the first Australian to be awarded the Sir Charles Mackerras Scholarship.

In 1887, Mr. Howells returned to South Australia, where he established himself as a teacher and composer. He was appointed the musical director of the South Australian Government School of Mines and Industries in 1890, and held the position for 30 years. He was also the founder of the Adelaide School of Music, and was a prominent figure in the musical life of the city.

Mr. Howells was a composer of considerable talent, and his works were performed throughout Australia and overseas. He was also a teacher of music, and his students included many of the leading musicians of the day.

Mr. Howells was a member of the Adelphi Concerts, and it was through his influence that the Advertiser was founded. He was a man of many parts, being at once a musician, a composer, and an encyclopaedia of South Australian music.

DEPARTMENT STORE FOR DURABLE FASHIONS.

A new department store for durable fashions has been opened in the heart of the city. The store, which is called "For Ever," specializes in clothing that is designed to last longer than the traditional "throwaway" fashions. The store stocks a wide range of garments, from business suits to casual wear, all designed to be worn for many years with minimal maintenance.

Mr. Howells' birthplace was in South London, England, and he was educated at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He was a student of the famous composer, Sir Charles Mackerras, and was the first Australian to be awarded the Sir Charles Mackerras Scholarship.

In 1887, Mr. Howells returned to South Australia, where he established himself as a teacher and composer. He was appointed the musical director of the South Australian Government School of Mines and Industries in 1890, and held the position for 30 years. He was also the founder of the Adelaide School of Music, and was a prominent figure in the musical life of the city.

Mr. Howells was a composer of considerable talent, and his works were performed throughout Australia and overseas. He was also a teacher of music, and his students included many of the leading musicians of the day.

Mr. Howells was a member of the Adelphi Concerts, and it was through his influence that the Advertiser was founded. He was a man of many parts, being at once a musician, a composer, and an encyclopaedia of South Australian music.

DEPARTMENT STORE FOR DURABLE FASHIONS.

A new department store for durable fashions has been opened in the heart of the city. The store, which is called "For Ever," specializes in clothing that is designed to last longer than the traditional "throwaway" fashions. The store stocks a wide range of garments, from business suits to casual wear, all designed to be worn for many years with minimal maintenance.

Mr. Howells' birthplace was in South London, England, and he was educated at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He was a student of the famous composer, Sir Charles Mackerras, and was the first Australian to be awarded the Sir Charles Mackerras Scholarship.

In 1887, Mr. Howells returned to South Australia, where he established himself as a teacher and composer. He was appointed the musical director of the South Australian Government School of Mines and Industries in 1890, and held the position for 30 years. He was also the founder of the Adelaide School of Music, and was a prominent figure in the musical life of the city.

Mr. Howells was a composer of considerable talent, and his works were performed throughout Australia and overseas. He was also a teacher of music, and his students included many of the leading musicians of the day.

Mr. Howells was a member of the Adelphi Concerts, and it was through his influence that the Advertiser was founded. He was a man of many parts, being at once a musician, a composer, and an encyclopaedia of South Australian music.

DEPARTMENT STORE FOR DURABLE FASHIONS.

A new department store for durable fashions has been opened in the heart of the city. The store, which is called "For Ever," specializes in clothing that is designed to last longer than the traditional "throwaway" fashions. The store stocks a wide range of garments, from business suits to casual wear, all designed to be worn for many years with minimal maintenance.

Mr. Howells' birthplace was in South London, England, and he was educated at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He was a student of the famous composer, Sir Charles Mackerras, and was the first Australian to be awarded the Sir Charles Mackerras Scholarship.

In 1887, Mr. Howells returned to South Australia, where he established himself as a teacher and composer. He was appointed the musical director of the South Australian Government School of Mines and Industries in 1890, and held the position for 30 years. He was also the founder of the Adelaide School of Music, and was a prominent figure in the musical life of the city.

Mr. Howells was a composer of considerable talent, and his works were performed throughout Australia and overseas. He was also a teacher of music, and his students included many of the leading musicians of the day.

Mr. Howells was a member of the Adelphi Concerts, and it was through his influence that the Advertiser was founded. He was a man of many parts, being at once a musician, a composer, and an encyclopaedia of South Australian music.