University Sports.

Graduates v. Undergraduates.

An interesting sports gathering was held on the University Oval on Wednesday, November 20th, between the cricket and lawn tennis of graduates and undergraduates. The match was the initiation of what is intended to be a regular annual function, and the attendance at the matches provided a clear indication of the importance that will be attached to the event in future years.

In this match, the cricket team was scheduled and carried out in a business, with the result that the difference was not large; but it is intended to extend the number of matches to four in the future.

In the games of cricket and lawn tennis, the participants from both teams were enthusiastic and active.

The University is from, and it is from there, the students' ranks, and in a great measure, the success of the intercollegiate teams is dependent on some of their best material, so that those of strength between the two teams are more likely to produce fine exhibitions of the respective batting skills and the usual class for the players. From this aspect, the University world of a cricket sports event in the past has put its strength and excellence on the line, and in the course of time, the students' ranks are likely to lose or gain that which they have maintained.

The match is at present only in its infancy, but a good start has been made, and the gathering has taken place, capital matches have been played, and the contest is entering into the last year, and the students' ranks are now in a much better position to hold a match with full satisfaction.

Lectures by Professor C. Brailsford Robertson.

Professor T. Brailsford Robertson delivered a lecture on "The Principles of Mental and Physical Development," at the University, and the lecture was well received by the students.

The intellectual efforts originated in the University, and the graduates have been able to use the results of their studies in their day-to-day work.
