THE DENTAL CONGRESS.

The majority of the inter-State delegations to the South Australian Dental Congress, which will open this morning, reached Adelaide on Sunday. They were accompanied by a number of members of the various State dental associations, who had arrived on the previous day. The opening session will be held in the Town Hall, and will be attended by the officials of the Dental Board of South Australia, the members of the local dental committee, and the dental officers of the various hospitals in the State. The proceedings will be concluded with a banquet at the Hotel Metropole.

THE DENTAL CONGRESS.

The sessions of the Australian Dental Congress began this month at the School of Mines, Adelaide, today. The attendance at the meeting in Melbourne in 1897, when the School of Mines was opened, was 800. The present attendance is about 3,000. The program includes papers by such well-known authorities as Dr. W. J. Harper, of the University of Sydney, and Dr. E. J. Hallahan, of the University of Melbourne. The congress is expected to last for ten days, during which time nearly all the leading dentists of the country will be present.

THE DENTAL CONGRESS.

The sessions of the Australian Dental Congress began this month at the School of Mines, Adelaide, today. The attendance at the meeting in Melbourne in 1897, when the School of Mines was opened, was 800. The present attendance is about 3,000. The program includes papers by such well-known authorities as Dr. W. J. Harper, of the University of Sydney, and Dr. E. J. Hallahan, of the University of Melbourne. The congress is expected to last for ten days, during which time nearly all the leading dentists of the country will be present.

There were no cheers for the resolution that called for the establishment of a national dental association in Australia. The motion was carried, however, by a large majority. The congress is expected to last for ten days, during which time nearly all the leading dentists of the country will be present.

There were no cheers for the resolution that called for the establishment of a national dental association in Australia. The motion was carried, however, by a large majority. The congress is expected to last for ten days, during which time nearly all the leading dentists of the country will be present.