A Brilliant Assemblage.

The crowning glory in connection with the University of Adelaide Conciliation Day was the magnificent representation of students in connection with the University of Adelaide, and the University of Adelaide staff and students in connection with the University of Adelaide. There was a large and varied representation of students and staff from both universities, and the atmosphere was one of mutual respect and support.

Children's Patriotic Fund. She had an opportunity of learning how warm and responsive was the interest in the Children's Patriotic Fund. She was sure that parents would agree that never was there a greater need for placing the interests of the community in the hands of the State. Did not the State own all the material resources of the country? Did not the State provide the best facilities for the development of the young generation?

The President said that his appeal to the students of the University and of the State was to consider the interests of the State, and to bear in mind that the State was the only body that could adequately look after the welfare of the young generation. He was confident that the students would respond to this appeal and would do their best to promote the welfare of the State.

Honoured by the University.

The University of Adelaide was honored by the presence of the Governor of South Australia, Sir John Down, who gave a speech in which he commended the University for its work in the field of education. He said that the University had played a very important role in the development of the State, and that it had a bright future ahead of it. The President of the University, Professor John Brown, also gave a speech in which he thanked the Governor for his kind words and expressed the hope that the University would continue to serve the State in the best possible way.

Mr. H. Heaton, M.A., addressed the Conference on "What is Truth?" He said that in these days of rapid scientific progress and modern enlightenment, it was more important than ever to keep in mind the fundamental principles of truth. He said that truth was the foundation of all knowledge, and that without it, everything would be mere speculation. He urged the students to strive for truth in all their pursuits, and to be true to themselves and to others.

The President said that the University would continue to stand for truth, and that it would always strive to promote the welfare of the State and its people. He said that the University would always be ready to listen to the views of its students, and that it would always be ready to work for the betterment of the State.

The University of Adelaide was honored by the presence of the Governor of South Australia, Sir John Down, who gave a speech in which he commended the University for its work in the field of education. He said that the University had played a very important role in the development of the State, and that it had a bright future ahead of it. The President of the University, Professor John Brown, also gave a speech in which he thanked the Governor for his kind words and expressed the hope that the University would continue to serve the State in the best possible way.