THE UNIVERSITY
FIRST RESIDENTIAL COLLEGE.

AN ANGLICAN PROJECT.

At a well-attended public meeting held in the Town Hall on Monday, Mr. W. B. Trotter, M.P., the president of the Methodist Conference, and Mr. F. M. E. Hall, F.R.S., cheered up the name of the church, to which they looked forward with great interest as a means of overcoming the social and intellectual barriers between the various denominations. They both agreed that the University should take the lead in this matter, and that there was a great need for such an institution. Mr. Trotter expressed his hope that the new college would be a focus for the promotion of higher education, and that it would be open to all students, regardless of their religious beliefs. Mr. Hall added that he believed the college would be a most valuable addition to the University, and that it would be a great step forward in the development of higher education in Australia.

The Bishop of Adelaide (Dr. A. Nuttall Travers) presided, and among those present were Lord Brougham, Sir George Murray, and Miss Murray, the president of the Congregational Union (Rev. G. Baynes, vice-chairman of the Metropolitan Conference). The Bishop expressed his delight at the prospect of the new college, and said that he was sure that it would be of great benefit to the community. He also pointed out that the college would not only provide a focus for religious instruction, but would also be a place where students could come together to discuss and explore the various aspects of life.

Mr. Trotter then addressed the meeting, and said that he had always been a firm believer in the importance of higher education. He said that he believed that the University should take the lead in this matter, and that it should be open to all students, regardless of their religious beliefs. He also said that he believed that the college would be a great step forward in the development of higher education in Australia.

The meeting adjourned after a very successful discussion, and it was agreed that the college should be established as soon as possible.
