UNIVERSITY RESIDENTIAL COLLEGES

AN INTERESTING DEBATE

At a recent meeting of the Graduates Association in Melbourne, Mr. J. R. Wilson, Q.C., M.P., and Mr. H. N. Adams, M.P., engaged in a debate on the need for university extension lectures. The debate was well attended, and the two speakers were well supported by a large audience.

Mr. Wilson, in his opening address, emphasized the importance of university extension lectures in providing education for those who are unable to afford higher education. He argued that the extension lectures should be made available to everyone, regardless of their financial situation.

Mr. Adams, in reply, emphasized the need for universities to provide higher education for those who are unable to afford it. He argued that universities should offer extension lectures to those who are interested in learning, regardless of their financial situation.

The debate was well received by the audience, and both speakers were well received.

RESIDENTIAL COLLEGES

IMPORTANT TO UNIVERSITY LIFE

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS

Professor J. R. Wilson, President of the Graduates' Association, has made some valuable suggestions for the improvement of the residential colleges. He has suggested that the residential colleges should be made more accessible to students, and that they should be more closely linked with the university.

He also suggested that the residential colleges should be more closely linked with the university, and that they should be more closely linked with the university.

The suggestions made by Professor Wilson were well received by the audience, and they are likely to be implemented soon.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES

TO THE NEXT GENERATION

The university extension lectures, which are open to all members of the university community, are an important part of the university's mission. They provide an opportunity for students to learn from the best minds in the world, and they are well received by the university community.

The extension lectures are held in the university's lecture halls, and they are open to all members of the university community.

The success of these lectures is due to the efforts of the university's extension department, which is responsible for organizing and promoting the lectures.

The extension department is well supported by the university community, and it is likely to continue its work in the future.

This concludes the report of the meeting of the Graduates Association in Melbourne.
