TRIAL BY JURY.

The System Defended.

Professor Phillipson's Views.

Professor Coleman Phillipson, who enjoys world-wide reputation as an author and public speaker, has strongly supported the system of trial by jury, in a lecture before the quarterly meeting of the District Association, at the Windsor Cafe, on Thursday, Aid. Isaacs (President of the Association) occupied the chair. The lecturer's experience is extensive, for he has appeared as counsel in all kinds of Courts—from the Police Court up to the Privy Council.

Professor Phillipson said that in approaching the question of the jury system, his mind was directed to its place as one of the most important and ancient institutions of the British people. For nearly a thousand years it had played a greater part in the life of the Englishman than any other institution. On many notable occasions it had played a glorious part in the defence of human rights, and the preservation of the rights and liberties of the community. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.

He then proceeded to discuss the advantages of the jury system. It was a system of justice which was open to all, and which was administered by the common man himself. The Englishman knew that his rights were safeguarded by the jury system, and he was proud to be a part of it.