DEATH OF MR. PETER WAITE

A PRINCE OF BENEFACENTS

Ripe in years and rich in honor, there passed away at his residence in the late afternoon a prince among benefactors to his adopted land—Mr. Peter Waite. It was pecuniarily appropriate that this distinguished 86-year-old gentleman should have been called to his resting place at a time of great activity, emboldened by deeds of beneficence, characterised by uprightness and enforced by a sense of duty to his fellow men. The death of Mr. Waite was a shock to many, as he had been expected to live many years longer, but his influence will remain for all time.

The late Mr. Peter Waite, born at Victor Harbor, South Australia, was the son of a pioneer farmer, and had been actively associated with his father's farm since early youth. He was a man of broad experience in the pastoral industry, and his death is a loss to the community.

Early Experiences

It was impossible to think of the pastoral industry in South Australia without remembering Mr. Waite. His influence on the industry was profound, and his death is a great loss to the community.

The Chancellor, on behalf of the University, extended to the family of the late Mr. Peter Waite, a note of sympathy. The Chancellor stated that Mr. Waite had been an active member of the University, and had contributed much to its welfare.

The Chancellor expressed the hope that the family would take comfort in the knowledge that Mr. Waite had lived a full and successful life, and that his memory would be held in high esteem by all who knew him.
