PERSONAL

Dr. Archibald T. Strong, who was appointed in December last to the chair of English Literature in the University of Adelaide, will take up his duties in March. He is a man of much experience and charming personality. He has been world-wide in literature, and has been associate editor of many of the great periodicals of the world. He is the brilliant son of a distinguished father, and is, as he himself says, a young man. His father was Dr. John Strong, a Professor of Classics at the University of Melbourne, and subsequently at Liverpool. Dr. A. T. Strong was born in 1868 in Melbourne, where he received his education in the old country. He was educated at Scotch College and Scotch College at Sydney, and at the University of Melbourne. He was also a student of the Melbourne University, and was awarded the B.A. degree in 1886. He has been an instructor in English Literature in many of the universities of Europe, and has contributed to many periodicals. He is the author of several books, including "The Making of the Modern English Poet," and "A History of English Literature." He is a member of the Australian Literary Society, and has been a contributor to many periodicals.

A Victorian Compliment.

The Baudelaire, in the course of his address to the University of Adelaide, has occasioned some excitement among the students. He has been a contributor to many periodicals, and has written articles on various subjects. His address was delivered in the University of Adelaide lecture hall, and was attended by a large audience. He has been a contributor to many periodicals, and has written articles on various subjects. His address was delivered in the University of Adelaide lecture hall, and was attended by a large audience.