The Commissary of Crown Lands (Hon. G. R. Laffey), is moving the second reading of the Agricultural Land Taxation Bill in the Assembly on Wednesday, pointed out that experience had shown that a number of men who had been educated at the Roseworthy Agricultural College and who had received their college diploma, had, through lack of means, been prevented from settling on the land. That was a grave loss to the State. In order to obviate the Bill proposed to assist the successful students to acquire suitable land and to make it possible for them during their early years on the land to purchase necessary stock and implements. It was intended to protect his diploma after the passing of the Bill, who had been more than 21 years of age when he had made his application, to use, if he received his diploma after the passing of the Bill, he must be under 25 years of age. The principal of the Roseworthy College, in effect, the advisory (sic) of all operations under the present. It was not expected that the number of students becoming eligible under the Bill would be large, but probably not more than four or five per annum. The amount to be advanced to any one applicant would not be more than £1,000 in any one year, and the case of a student who had graduated, would not pay any rent for the first four years, and for the next six years, the rent would be reduced to one-fourth of the rate payable to other lessees. In the case of ordinary agreements, the term would be extended by 10 years, and the rent would be payable for the first eight years. The Government was enabled in buy single farm properties for the suit, which would be held by the Board of Agriculture, and would be sold by the Advance to the State Board. The details of the Board, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Gann) has been appointed to it, and the Board will be under the direction of Mr. G. W. Gann.
