RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

A memorandum, setting out new regulations for Rhodes scholarships throughout Australia, has just been adopted and circulated to Rhodes Trustees. One of the most important features in the amendments governing elections to the Rhodes scholarships is that in the first instance the candidates must be nominated by their University authorities for special notice. First, it is provided that, in future, domicile for five years in Australia is necessary for the candidate, and that candidate may compete, either in the State in which they have their ordinary domicile, or in that in which they have received any education, or of which they are a citizen. Second, it is provided that candidates must have reached the age of 21, and that the age limit is not 25 years. The result of these amendments is that the University authorities will be able to nominate at least two years in advance of the University in question by October 1 of the year in which they are likely to receive education. It is also provided that information and copies of the form of application may be obtained by the University authorities. The amendment also provides that the University authorities shall be the secretaries of the Rhodes scholarships in Australia (Mr. J. C. V. Behan, Trinity College, Parramatta, Victoria). The amendment is intended to simplify the administration of the State Scholarship Committee and the Rhodes trusteed. The trusts held by the committee of the University authorities for the Commonwealth of Australia are to be vested in the University authorities for the Commonwealth of Australia.
