Psychology.

If I were asked what was the most important single principle in psychology, I would not hesitate to answer: the principle of the unconscious. This is a principle which universal experience has taught us to regard as a simple truth. The unconscious mind is the source of all mental activity.

The great problem of modern psychology is the study of the unconscious mind. It is the problem of how to understand the workings of the unconscious mind and how to control it.

The unconscious mind is the source of all mental activity. It is the source of all imagination, all inspiration, all creativity. It is the source of all that we think and feel and do.
